

WALLACE, BEAUTY PARADE TO DRAW THROG

Fate of Section 7A Now Up to Supreme Court in Houde-Union Controversy

WASHINGTON—The real struggle over the New Deal's labor policies is not being waged on the picket line, nor around the arbitration table.

These clashes are spectacular and dramatic. But the final decision on labor's legal right to organize in independent unions for "collective bargaining" will not be determined on these battle fronts.

It will be made in the quiet session of the United States Supreme Court.

That is why industry, labor, and the Administration have their eyes glued on what has already come to be known as the "Houde case"—likely to become the cause celebre of current labor history.

The case grew out of a ruling by the National Labor Relations Board several weeks ago ordering the Houde Engineering Company of Buffalo, N. Y., to recognize the independent union to which a majority of its employees belong.

The NLRB based its action on an interpretation of the famous Section 7A upholding the demand of labor to organize unions for collective bargaining.

The Houde company defied the NLRB, refused to abide by its ruling.

The NLRB requested the NRA to "jerk" its Blue Eagle, which was done. It also requested the Department of Justice to prosecute.

This court test is now in the making. At stake is the fate of Section 7A, the heart of the President's labor policy. If the NLRB is upheld, the history of American labor. If the NLRB is reversed, labor unquestionably will demand new legislation of Roosevelt.

Baldy

George E. Allen, Washington's "dapper" District Commissioner, is bald.

While his hair was falling out he was much disturbed, resorted to innumerable remedies. But to no avail.

Recently a friend asked him if he was still fretting about his baldness.

"None," Allen replied. "I gave up trying everything. But when my hair fell out I decided to cooperate and get it over with. I shaved and began pulling it out."

Auto War

Three of the biggest producers in the auto industry are waging a hammer and tongs war behind the scenes.

The controversy is not directly connected with the motor vehicle business—it is a continuation of a long-standing commercial feud. There is big money involved.

The dispute revolves about RUC Chairman Jesse Jones' plan for a partial payoff to depositors of the First National Bank of Detroit, the last closed bank in the world.

Under Jones' scheme, the RUC would advance $83,000,000 to finance a 20 per cent "dividend" to all depositors, but only if a majority of the big depositors agreed in advance to turn back 10 per cent of their share so that all depositors with accounts of $300, or less, could be paid in full.

Three of the biggest depositors are Henry Ford, General Motors, and Chrysler Motor Co. Ford, with $25,000,000 frozen in the bank, is willing to accept the Jones proposal.

But General Motors and Chrysler—his bitter competitors—are yet to agree.

Jones made a hurried trip to the auto city last week in an effort to

GRAND JURORS HOLD SIX FOR COURT TRIAL

Dozen Charges Ignored as October Session Comes To Its End

HEAR 40 WITNESSES

Arraignment Expected
Before End Of Week

Six persons were indicted and 12 charges were ignored by the October grand jury which concluded its one and one-half day session at noon Tuesday. Forty witnesses were questioned by Prosecutor Ray W. Davis.

J. E. Ward was foreman of the jury. Arraignment of the persons against whom true bills were returned will probably be held Friday or Saturday in Judge J. W. Adkins' court.

The six indicted were: Forrest Roseboom, on two counts of forgery. He allegedly signed the name of Edward Cledennett to a check made payable to Harry Jones.

Helma Creason, for grand larceny by theft of clothing from Parrett's store.

Jack Cox, for grand larceny on the same charge.

Frank Perry, on a statutory offense involving a Perry-two youth.

Robert Shively, for burglary and grand larceny of the home of J. L. Smith.

Edwin Lewis, for embezzlement of $25.50 from Charles Caskey.

Charges ignored were against: F. E. Corkwell and John Harness, assault; Mrs. Tom Ramsey, petit larceny; James Huffer, embezzlement; Albert Knece, Paris Keaton, Stanley and Marie Goodman, Sam Anderson, and Milton Smallwood, assault and battery; James Creason, grand larceny; Clara Moore, embezzlement.

The jurors visited the county jail and praised the sheriff's office for its clean and sanitary condition.

C. of C. Planning Novel Pumpkin Show Souvenir

"Wooden Nickels" Placed In Circulation; Redeemable
At Full Value.

The Pumpkin Show has never had an official souvenir and this year the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a novel souvenir and a novel method of its distribution.

The idea hinges upon the expression "don't take any wooden nickels" and the souvenir is in the form of a "wooden nickel." Its novelty lies in the fact that the souvenir can be used as money at the concessions of the Pumpkin Show and the Chamber of Commerce is guaranteeing the redemption of the "wooden nickels" that are not retained as souvenirs.

All concessions at the Pumpkin Show will accept the "wooden nickels" as payment for rides and amusements at their "nickel" value and persons desiring to furnish rides or other amusement to members of their families simply go to the booth which will be located at the end of the show, buy as many wooden nickels as they wish for the family and then use them as tickets to the amusements.

The "wooden nickels" will be redeemed if desired at the booth where they are sold and provision will be made for their redemption up to Monday following the Show.

The "wooden nickels" are an all Circleville product. The wood material comes from the L. B. Evans mill and the work of making the "nickels" is being done at the "Klump Kit" division of the M. G. Gessler Sons Company.

The souvenir is of wood and about the size of half a dollar and mounted on both sides with lettering and pictures of the traditional Show pumpkin which make it a very desirable keep sake, or souvenir of the 1934 Pumpkin Show so be ready to get your "wooden nickels" at the Chamber of Commerce booth.

FATHER PASSES AWAY

Elmer Farr, S. Scioto-st. inter-city operator for The Herald, received word Tuesday morning that his father died suddenly Monday at his home in Lynchburg.

Plan for School Parade Outlined by Instructors

Expected to be the feature Pumpkin Show event since the last school parade in 1928, officials of Circleville schools headed by Superintendent E. L. Daley, who is ably assisted by teachers in the various schools, are gradually completing their plans for this year's parade which is scheduled Thursday afternoon. It is hoped to have the procession in motion at exactly 2 o'clock, as scheduled on the official program.

The parade will form on E. Main-st. move west to Scioto-st. north on Scioto to High, east on High to Court and south on Court to Mound, where it will disband.

Considering the small amount of time the school teachers and principals have had in which to prepare for the big event much progress has been made. All will be ready when parade time arrives.

"OCCUPATIONS" THEME

The general theme carried out this year is "occupations."

The order of march and a description of what each grade and class will portray was disclosed at a meeting of the various school leaders in Mr. Daley's office Monday afternoon.

The American Legion drum corps, augmented by members of the Chillicothe unit, will "blast" the way with Pumpkin Show and city officials next in line, to be followed by the Hallsville band. The board of education will precede the first part of the actual school parade, a decorated automobile from the Jones and Stout garage carrying a banner announcing the general theme of the elementary grades. Another sign will be seen in the line of march at each change in the grades to tell what the next is portraying.

The first grades' theme is dairying. The girls of all the first grades will be dressed as milk maids. Franklin boys will represent butter, being dressed in yellow and carrying baskets pretending to be delivering butter; Cor-

Wheat Sowing Underway in Pickaway-co Tuesday

Monday, Oct. 1, was the fly-free date in Pickaway-co but because of the heavy rain Saturday the soil was too wet to do much wheat sowing. Many farmers were busy in their fields today while others will be sowing during the remainder of the week.

October 1 had been set as the date to begin sowing wheat in this section to avoid damage by Hessian fly, and farmers have been busy for the last week disk and preparing the seedbed. Acreage in

COUNTY GETS $9,323 FUND

State's Relief Expenditures
Cut $164,193; More Families
On Relief.

A sum of $9,323 will be sent to Pickaway-co by the state relief commission for October, it was disclosed today.

The money will be divided into the following funds:

Direct relief, $5,262;
Works projects, $2,956;
Emergency schools, $375;
Transients, $15.

PRRA projects for "white collared" unemployed, $715.

The October budgets of the state are $164,195 less than allotted for the five weeks period ending October 4. At the same time, it was estimated that 194,918 families would require aid during October as compared with 185,291 in September.

The total amount to be dispensed by the state during the month is $8,091,555. More than half is for direct relief.

Best wishes of the Chillicothe Chamber of Commerce for the success of the Pumpkin Show were expressed in a communication to The Herald today by R. E. "Mike" Myers, secretary of the organization.

GIRL'S MOTHER GOES ON STAND

Tells of Friendship Between Dead Daughter and Boy Accused of Death.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 2.—Mrs. George McKechie, mother of Freda, today took the stand as the first state witness at the "American tragedy" murder trial of 21-year-old Bobby Edwards, alleged betrayer and slayer of her daughter.

Mrs. McKechie, a quiet-faced, bespectacled woman, was dressed in black with a bonnet over her dark hair.

She spoke in a clear, semi-husky voice. She told of how the McKechies lived in Edwardsville, the colliery town, near the Edwards.

Her daughter recently celebrated her 20th birthday, she said.

Freda was a telephone operator up until the time she died," she said, simply.

Then the mother of Freda related the details of the romance between her daughter and the handsome young mine surveyor who had a neighborhood reputation for being a ladies' man.

GAZES AT WITNESS

Through it all, Edwards faced the witness with his hands clasped before him, gazing steadfastly and intensely at Mrs. McKechie.

"Freda and Bobby went to the same church," Mrs. McKechie said. "Freda had a boy friend, George Thomas, but she gave him up for Bobby."

"Bobby used to visit Freda four and five nights a week. What did they do? Oh, Bobby would come in and just sit."

"They would go for walks and to the movies sometimes. They were

TWO DIE FROM GAS, TRY TO SAVE FOUR

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—Medical science battled today to save the life of a Cleveland mother and three of her children from the effects of deadly carbon monoxide fumes which already have snuffed out the lives of her two sons.

Howard Martin, 8, and his six-year-old brother, Ronald, died at St. Johns hospital here yesterday afternoon from the poison fumes which escaped into the Martin home from a broken water heater flue.

Blood transfusions were to be given the mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, 33, today at the hospital in an attempt to save her life. She was reported in a semi-conscious condition.

Blood donors were called early today for Curtis, 13, another son, who was still unconscious from the gas. After the transfusion, physicians gave him an even chance to recover.

A daughter, Christine, 11, was reported out of danger today.

The mother and her four children were found lying on the floor of their small apartment by neighbors when smoke and the odor of burning food attracted their attention.

LEGION TO SPONSOR GIANT STEER HERE

One of the biggest attractions of the Pumpkin Show will be the gigantic steer brought here from Bourbon-co, Kentucky, under the auspices of the American Legion. The steer will be shown on W. Main-st. opposite the Grant Co. store.

Col. Jack Howard, of Bourbon-co, who owns the five and one-half year old animal, will be here to be in charge of the steer which is reported even larger than Ripley's in Chicago.

It has never been moved from its home county until the trip to the Pumpkin Show. The journey was engineered by James Caldwell, well-known cattle man.

GAS CO. SEEKS HIGHER COURT

Approval of 55-Cent Rate To Be Asked In Ohio Supreme Court.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Suddenly shifting its tactics in an effort to retain $300,000 paid by gas consumers under protest, the Columbus Gas and Fuel company today was scheduled to enter the Ohio supreme court to obtain approval of a 55-cent gas rate ordinance.

Attorneys for the city also were expected to appear and plead for a 48-cent rate once approved by the supreme court.

Counsel for the gas company, it was recalled, once had fought the 55-cent rate but the objections were withdrawn and the gas company expressed itself willing to accept the 55-cent rate which was fixed by the public utilities commission two years ago.

The ordinance proposing the 55-cent rate expires November 12. However, if the supreme court approved the rate, the gas company would automatically retain $300,000 collected in excess of the proposed 48-cent rate. Otherwise it would be refunded to consumers.

After the rate ordinance expires next month, it was believed that the city and the company would enter into new negotiations.

OPENING DAY'S PROGRAM FULL, STARTS AT 12

Secretary of Agriculture to Talk as Near After 7:30 as Possible

PARADE IS AT 7:15

"Miss Pumpkin Show"
Title Sought By Many

Circleville's thirty-first annual Pumpkin Show, destined undoubtedly to become one of the finest in recent years, opens at noon Wednesday for one of the biggest first days in many years.

Two major attractions have been arranged for the opening day, one the appearance of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, the other the beauty parade.

Mr. Wallace, a forceful member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, will speak at Main and Pickaway-sts as near after 7:30 p. m. as possible. It is planned to construct a platform on the northeast corner with a loud speaking system installed to carry the voice of the secretary of agriculture to all corners. Farm bureau officials estimate there will be 10,000 to 15,000 persons in his audience. A number of dignitaries from all parts of the state are expected in addition to scores of farm leaders who are interested in his message concerning the government's crop policies.

NOT ON POLITICS

The speaker is brought here by the Pickaway-co. It is emphatically asserted that he is not coming here for political purposes.

The beauty parade is on the official program for 7:15 p. m. Wednesday and will be staged accordingly. Wallace's address is expected to take place immediately following this event. Clayton G. Chaffin is in charge of the beauty parade and said today he expected to have between 12 and 20 entries.

Some of the most prominent girls in the city and county have entered the competition most of whom are sponsored by civic clubs or business houses. With a grand prize of $50 planned for the winner there is quite an objective.

Miss Lucille Helms, last year's "Miss Pumpkin Show" will represent the Ebert Soda Grill in the parade, it has been announced. There is still plenty of time to enter, Mr. Chaffin reports, and he hopes other business houses will see fit to sponsor contestants.

FORMS ON PICKNEY

The parade forms on Pickney-st. goes south on Scioto to Main, east on Main to Washington, on Washington to Franklin, west on Franklin to Court, and north on Court to Pickney where judging will be done.

Most of the girls will ride in automobiles while some will be on foot.

Out-of-town judges who have no acquaintance with the contestants have been selected to pick "Miss Pumpkin Show" who will preside in all parades and other general events.

Music for the entire engagement will be provided by the American Legion drum corps, Hallsville band, and both junior and senior bands of the Public schools.

Free acts are scheduled each day at 1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, 10 and 11 o'clock. It behooves everyone to see these acts because they are guaranteed to satisfy.

DETAILS ALL SET

Final details of the big show were ironed out Monday evening when directors met in the city council chamber. It promises to be bigger and better than ever.

The office of Secretary Mack Parrott, Jr., and his assistant, Sterling Lamb, will be located in the city building all week, while R. G. Colville, treasurer of the show, in transacting his business in the office of L. T. Shaner in the city building.

BROWN CHILD DIES

Charles William Brown, 5-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, W. High-st. died of lymphatic leukemia after a three weeks' illness at University hospital, Columbus, Monday, at 8:40 p. m.

The child was born in this city April 22, 1934, son of Charles and Grace Beatrice Shirley Brown.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the late home with Rev. George L. Trohman of Trinity Lutheran church officiating.

Burial will be in Forest cemetery by M. S. Rinehart.

Detroit Baseball Crazy As Opening Game Nears

By DAVID J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor.

DETROIT, Oct. 2.—Almost as one man, the violent residents of this baseball crazy town arose this morning, uttered a prolonged, piercing shriek, leaped high in the air and forgot to come down. It was the day before the first world series the town had known in all of 25 years, an occasion so historic that business was practically inert and the only place where privacy was possible was inside a telephone booth.

Three hundred thousand people, it was estimated, were roaming the town looking for tickets for tomorrow's inaugural game between the Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals. Long, patient queues waited at the mutely locked and silent windows. All through the night and well into the morning, a steady flow of motor cars beat their way into town from the upper Michigan peninsula and the neighboring states of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

WHOLE TOWN FILLED

Keyed up like a concert violin by this long-deferred pennant for the Tigers and the dramatic, last day victory of the Cardinals in the National league, they came by rail, by bus line and planes and, long before noon today, the hotels were so taxed in their lobby limits that some saw fit to remove the potted palms and sundry bric-a-brac.

Nobody yet has found a way to remove a potted baseball fan.

The Cards, a slight favorite in the betting, made the city this morning in an overnight jump from St. Louis and will work out at Navin field later in the day. They might do well if they don't make it too much later, inasmuch as showers were forecast for late this afternoon and there was even a possibility that the first game tomorrow might have to go by default.

Accompanying the Cardinals were the Dean boys, Delirious and his brother, Panegyric, not to forget a rumor or two about the Cardinal staff.

It was figured that Delirious would win at least two of the games; whereas, if he isn't ready tomorrow, he'll do all right if he finds time thereafter to even pitch two games. He went for his last work two days ago when he won his 30th game of the year, thus earning the distinction of being the foremost pitcher of all baseball and, at the same time clinching the pennant for St. Louis with a shut-out over the Cincinnati Reds.

NEED BIG BROTHER

Delirious, hot or cold, simply will have to be ready or the Cards will be no better than even money, if that, against a club that hits as the Tigers do. At the same time, there has been some talk for and against brother Paul for the first game, with Delirious untracking himself for the second here on Thursday and either Hallahan or Carleton obliging in the third game on Friday, opening the St. Louis end of the series.

But this being a series in which there are no off days, the best they could do with Delirious under that arrangement would be to pitch him in the second and fifth games and then forget about him, which is a bit difficult if not downright silly. In the first place, he ought to pitch the first, fourth and seventh games. In the second, he won't even forget about himself.

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

NO MONDAY LET-DOWN

There was no Monday let-down in practice sessions of the Circleville high school football squad—a long, hard drill on tackling and blocking was the treat Coach Pete Herberholz had in store for his stalwarts Monday.

The team is preparing for a trip to Marysville Friday in which the lid will be pried off the Central Buckeye league race.

First the backs would carry the pigskin with every lineman on the squad taking a crack at them, then the linemen carried the leather—later the ball was being snapped from center with a back carrying, two guards going out to get the end; as a result the end bore the brunt of the smacking. It was a mighty good workout and one which should benefit the team since its tackling has not been keen.

John Turley, Ohio Wesleyan's passing ace, doesn't score many touchdowns himself, but he throws plenty of them. Beginning his third and last season as a Battling Bishop, Turley has thrown passes that resulted directly in nine touchdowns and his long accurate tosses have put the ball in position for other scores. He led his team to a 24 to 0 victory over Heidelberg in the Bishops' first game. They play Dayton at Dayton Friday night.

FANS FOR CARDINALS
The consensus of local sports fans seems to be that St. Louis will win the World series because of the Dean brothers—A team which comes from behind as did the Cardinals merits the praise of the sporting world but fans should not underrate the Detroit team which has been resting on its oars for the past week waiting for the winner of the National loop to be determined—Every member of the Detroit staff is ready to go; is Dizzy Dean after working three times in six days? It is possible he will not start the series although fans would not be surprised if he hops onto that mound.

LAND VALUES RISING
SPRINGFIELD, O.—A statewide survey in Ohio shows that real estate prices are rising and that increase in land values is greatly aiding building and loan institutions, according to James A. Devine of Columbus, executive secretary of the Ohio Building and Loan Association.

FACTS ON SERIES

DETROIT, Oct. 2.—Salient facts concerning the world series:

Contending clubs—Detroit Tigers, American league champions, and St. Louis Cardinals, National league champions.

Schedule of games—October 3 and 4 at Navin field, Detroit; October 5, 6 and 7 at Sportsman's park, St. Louis; October 8 and 9 at Detroit.

Starting time—1:30 p. m. (EST) for all games at Detroit; 2:30 p. m. (EST) at St. Louis.

Conditions of play—world championship goes to team winning four games, postponed games to be played off in city where originally scheduled on next possible playing date, with entire schedule advanced accordingly.

Seating capacity: 47,000 at Detroit; 40,000 at St. Louis.

Rival managers—Frank Frisch, Cardinals; Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane, Tigers.

Betting odds—Three-five on Cardinals to win series; even money on opening game.

Umpires—National league, William J. Klem and John Reardon; American league, Clarence (Brick) Owens and Harry Geisel.

'AG' DIRECTOR SEES VICTORY FOR AAA PLAN

Farmers Marching To Polls
To Decide Future of Curtailment Plans.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Dr. H. C. Ramsower, agricultural extension director at Ohio State university, today predicted a victory for the "New Deal" as farmers throughout the state today started balloting on the future of the government's corn-hog curtailment program in 1935.

At the same time, Dr. Ramsower revealed that the federal government had definitely committed itself to long-term farm planning.

75,000 TO VOTE
Dr. Ramsower said he expected that at least 75,000 Ohio farmers would be among the 1,200,000 farmers in the nation to journey to the polling places. "I believe that they will approve the curtailment program," he predicted.

He pointed out that the 75,000 farmers in this state who had signed contracts this year will receive a total of $17,000,000.

On the ballots, which will be presented to farmers at community gatherings supervised by agricultural extension agents, two questions were written.

1. Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hog in 1935?

2. Do you favor a one-contract-per-farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936?

The latter question, according to Dr. Ramsower, indicated definitely that the government planned to carry out its farm relief plan over a long-term period.

First results of the balloting in Ohio were not expected to be completed until late this week or early next week.

Meanwhile, Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA, warned that there was danger that both the acreage and production of corn would be excessive in 1935 unless there is some adjustment program in effect.

Mr. Adkins declared with Donahy and Dill to provide the only actual speeches.

Invitations have been sent to the chairman of all Democratic committees in counties of the district and Mr. Adkins hopes to fill the hall.

All the Pickaway-co Democratic organizations are cooperating to make the meeting a mammoth one.

LEBANON, Oct. 2.—Clarence J. Brown, Republican nominee for governor, today had carried his campaign into his home congressional district with an attack on the state highway department.

Speaking here, Brown charged the highway department had "signally failed in its purpose." He also claimed that "a million dollars a year could be saved in the department and more and better highways built."

The Republican nominee attacked the bond-interest-moratorium proposed by his Democratic opponent, Martin L. Davey, asserting that "only disaster could follow such a program."

He attacked the "treacherous growth of bureaucracy" and pointing to the increase of personnel in state government, he concluded:

"Public money that should have been spent for public improvement has been expended for salaries paid those feeding from the public trough."

LEFT-HANDER HALTS BIRDS IN 7-2 GAME

Hollingsworth Gives Four Hits
As Elliott is Chased Off the Hill.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—It was left up to young Al Hollingsworth, southpaw star, to return the Maple Leafs to the running in the little world series. He defeated the rampant Columbus Red Birds, 7-2, Monday evening with his mates driving Jumbo Elliott off the hill with an early barrage of base hits.

The series now stands two to one for the Ohioans with another game scheduled tonight. It is probable the same pitchers who started the first game will be in action, Don Brennan and Ed Greer, Lucas and Heusser were also possibilities.

Columbus got only four hits off Hollingsworth and did not score until the eighth inning when Billy Myers tripled Teachtout over then onto a fly ball. The southpaw, who goes to the Cincinnati Reds next year, fanned eight and walked three.

Post Office Business Shows Fine Increase Postmaster Reports

Much improvement in post office business during the September quarter was reported Tuesday by A. Hulse Hays, postmaster.

Fourteen employees including Mr. Hays were kept busy at the windows with some persons being forced to wait even then.

"The increase has been very noticeable," Mr. Hays said.

COUNTY DEMOCRATS OPEN THEIR ROOMS IN CRIST BUILDING

Pickaway-co Democratic headquarters were opened Monday in the Crist building, W. Main-st., in the rooms formerly occupied by Adkins and Adkins. Miss Betty Brown is in charge of the headquarters.

The rooms will be open daily, until after the November election for the convenience of candidates and other interested persons, who are invited to use them.

County Agent Lauds Community's Spirit

A splendid tribute was paid to Circleville's community spirit shown in preparation for the Pumpkin Show by F. K. Blair, new county agent, Monday evening when as a guest of the Kiwanis club he made a short talk in which he outlined details for the address of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace tomorrow evening. He also explained plans for the state corn husking and field day to be held November 2 near Darbyville. He also showed pictures of last year's husking contest.

Mr. Blair was a guest of John H. Dunlap. The club committee nominated C. E. Hill and Russell Inler for president, and Harold J. Bowers and Clarence Heilinger for vice president. The election will take place October 15 with the club voting to attend a district meeting in Chillicothe next Monday.

TWO TURKEYS COST
FATHER AND SON $5
Agreeing to settle for $5 Seymour and Walter Armentrout, Perry-twp., were released Monday from charges filed against them in Squire H. O. Ewald's court by Mrs. Jennie Seward, Darby-twp., who claimed they shot two turkeys belonging to her.

The Armentrouts are father and son.

pire and sixteen co-defendants charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Seated in a single row back of the defendants' counsel table were seventeen captains of finance, who must answer to conduct in connection with the formation of Corporation Securities company, a last minute inspiration of the panic-stricken utilities czar in 1929.

JURY IS SOUGHT

Selection of the jury before whom United States Attorney Dwight H. Green will attempt to prove the 17 defendants devised "a scheme and artifice to defraud," was to begin today.

Attorneys expect the court drama will continue for at least three months.

The intricate and involved financial workings of the entire Insull empire, which embraced 32 states, served 5,000 communities, had assets of 2500 million dollars, and served five million customers, will be revealed as the government seeks to prove its allegations.

Insull, many of the defendants, and their counsel conferred far into the night last night at the former chief's small apartment. He refused to see reporters, but that he is taking an active and leading part in his fight was indicated by Samuel, Jr., who declared:

"He is up to his neck in work, and will not see anyone outside the case."

"He told me he wants to keep his mind on the issues of the case, and nothing else."

The corporation securities company, Insull's last promotion, was launched Oct. 5, 1929, just before the market collapse. Stock sold to the public at $75 and rocketed to $115 before toppling to the depths in the market panic.

WAGED FUTILE FIGHT

For almost three years Insull and his associates waged a futile fight to keep the company and other Insull enterprises solvent, a fight climaxed by receiverships, bankruptcy, and the self-exile of Insull.

Federal indictments against Insull and his co-defendants in the $150,000,000 crash, allege use of the mails to defraud in the dissemination of literature to prospective investors.

SEVEN DIE

the cross-channel steamer Biarritz. The ill-fated plane, in the service of Hillman's Airways, Ltd., left the line's airport in Essex-co. at 10 o'clock for Le Bourget field, Paris, with six passengers and a pilot named Bannister.

Steaming in a downpour of rain through the choppy channel from Folkestone, the Biarritz passed close to the wreckage of the plane shortly before 11 o'clock, three miles south of Folkestone. A lifeboat was quickly lowered, but only the bodies of Bannister and four passengers could be found. Other ships were now standing by.

Airport officials said they had heard an SOS from an unidentified plane some time after the Hillman liner took off.

The Hillman company is privately owned, operating in competition with French and British government-owned or subsidized services.

For a fortnight this summer, Amy Mollison, famous trans-Atlantic aviatrix, piloted Hillman machines to and from Paris.

Pilot Bannister had 3,300 flying hours to his credit.

The Biarritz, later information showed, was steaming four miles from Folkestone, when she was hit by the German cargo boat, Leander, which was standing by the wreckage.

The Leander had picked up two bodies, and a small English boat a third. The Biarritz took on these three victims, then lowered a boat and searched the wreck and found two more.

WARSAW, Oct. 2.—At least ten passengers were killed and 31 seriously injured in a train wreck at Kreszodice station, southwest Poland, today.

Two fast express trains smashed together in a heavy fog.

Scenes of horror stretched before rescue workers, with the bodies of dead and injured littering the track or pinned in the wreckage.

Scores have been given first aid treatment for minor injuries, in addition to those seriously hurt.

HURL THREATS OF DEATH AT OHIOANS

TOLEDO, Oct. 2.—Two letters, believed authentic by authorities, demanding $5,000 under threats of kidnapping and death to himself and his son have been received during the last three weeks by Henry P. Streicher, well-known Toledo contractor, police revealed today.

The Streicher boy has been kept out of school under a police guard since the first letter was received, police said.

Both letters were crudely written, part in long hand and part printed, on a very high grade of stationery. The first ransom note was dated September 18.

About 15 per cent of the world's chemicals are manufactured in countries which in 1913 had no important chemical manufactures.

win boys will be farmers; High-st. all dressed in white, being milk men on their daily deliveries, and Walnut-st. as milk bottles, both whole milk and chocolate.

The float used in this parade will be prepared by Circle City dairy, Pickaway Dairy Co., and Charles Walters.

NURSES, DOCTORS

The second grades will portray medicine, the girls in all four buildings being dressed as nurses. The boys of Franklin will be surgeons, of High and Walnut will be old-fashioned doctors, and Corwin the internes. The float is made possible through the city safety department showing Berger hospital.

The theme of the third grades is mining. The boys of Corwin-st will be silver miners and the girls silver dollars; special education boys will be coal miners; Frankie boys will be salt miners and the girls lumps of coal; Walnut boys will be coal miners and the girls chunks of coal, and the High-st. boys will be gold miners and the girls lumps of gold. Eight children dressed as demons will also appear in this section. The float is being arranged by N. T. Weldon, R. P. Enderlin, S. C. Grant, Helvering and Scharenberg and Raders.

The fourth grade promises to draw much attention with farming being represented. All will be dressed as farmers and housekeepers with different colors distinguishing the various schools. High-st. will be blue, Corwin-st. green, Walnut-st. purple and tan, and Franklin-st. pink. The float will be a farm scene with farm implements, pumpkins and a husking bee in progress.

MILLING INDUSTRY

Another of Pickaway-co's paramount occupations is presented by the fifth grades, milling. The boys and girls of Franklin and High-st. schools will be dressed by the Eschelman Milling Co. as millers and the girls as sacks, while the boys and girls of Walnut and Corwin will be dressed as millers and sacks by the Ralston-Purina Milling Co. Since the designs of both these companies are outstanding the fifth grades are expected to attract much attention. The Eschelman Co. is furnishing a float.

After the fifth grade will be found the junior band.

Three canning companies, Emeraldal Winery Co. and Sears-Nichols, are furnishing labels and lids to outfit boys and girls of all the sixth grades. The girls will wear dresses made of labels while the boys will wear costumes made of lids. The companies are also furnishing the float.

The seventh grade will present another feature of the parade with the baking occupation as the theme. All the boys will be bakers while the girls will be dressed in smocks and head bands to represent kitchen work. Rolling pins will also be carried by many of the girls to help make the baking theme more realistic. Special education No. 2 will be included in the seventh grade. A bride and groom with a wedding cake will be shown and a number of Simple Simons will be in this parade. Each bakery, W. E. Wallace and Fritz Steam bakery will furnish a float for the parade.

The eighth grade theme is engineering with a float representing that occupation. Different types of electrical equipment will be carried by the boys while the girls will be dressed in home economics outfits and carrying electrical appliances. Marine, locomotive, aeronautical, chemical and civil engineering will have parts in the parade.

FOR LEISURE TIME

Then will come the high school presentations which will show occupations for leisure time. The high school band is included in the first division, music, and will march in that section. The glee club will then come in line wearing vestments loaned by the Presbyterian church after which will be found a float representing good reading. It will show a living room in a typical American home with the father, mother, son and daughter seated around a fireside.

ASHVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ebert of Des Moines, Iowa, are here on a visit to his folks, D. H. Ebert, and other relatives and friends.

The M. E. and U. B. churches have lunch booths at the Circleville Pumpkin Show this week.

The Protective association staged their annual fish supper in the K. of P. building last Friday night. A large number were present and enjoyed the repast.

G. H. Messick and family and C. H. Messick and family of Columbus, were here Sunday afternoon with their mother, Mrs. Laura A. Messick.

The home of D. H. Ebert on Main-st. was the scene of a happy occasion Sunday where a grand family dinner was served to all his children and their families.

The public sale of the household goods of Mrs. Mary Shannon, formerly of near Grove City, was held Saturday afternoon in the vacant room formerly occupied by the bowling alley, on Long-st.

The first quarterly meeting of the conference year will be held at the Ashville U. B. church on Wednesday evening, October 10.

WALLACE IS SCION

ing, he has succeeded in producing a hybrid variety of corn which consistently yields from four to ten bushels an acre more than the varieties prevailing in Iowa. As a student of the farmer's economic problems, he foresaw the long agricultural depression which began in 1921, and as early as January, 1919, in his magazine predicted that the years following the World War would be as full of grief for American farmers as the years following the Napoleonic Wars were for English farmers. In 1919 and 1920, while prices still high, he urged farmers that that was the time to pay off their debts.

AIDED ROOSEVELT

Though for years the Wallaces supported the Republican party, in the early '20's Henry A. Wallace became convinced that the Republican leadership was leading farmers and everybody else into grave trouble, especially, as he saw it, because they refused to see the significance of the change of the United States from a debtor to a creditor nation with respect to international trade. Finally, Wallace left the Republican party definitely in 1928, and ever since then has been identified with the Democrats. He has said that under Roosevelt he sees a chance, for the first time in years, for farmers to get a measure of social justice such as they have not known for many years.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, operating under his general supervision, is one of the mechanisms by which, in his opinion, the farmer can get a fair share of the national income. The adjustment programs, several of which have involved thousands of Ohio farmers, have been a factor in raising farm prices of leading products this year to more than double what they were in 1932, and in increasing farm cash income both by these price increases and by the benefit payments made to farmers in return for an agreement to adjust acreage and production to market requirements.

Secretary Wallace, it is announced, will speak extemporaneously both at the luncheon in Chillicothe and at the evening meeting that he will discuss the adjustment programs of interest to Ohio farmers, and that he will also outline the problems of the immediate future.

very friendly. When Bobby went away to Mansfield, Pa., college they corresponded.

"For Christmas, Bobby gave her a pair of lingerie clasp. For Easter he gave her a red pocket-book. Freda carried it—the last night she went out."

Then Mrs. McKechnie told how the romance "just dwindled away" after Bobby met Margaret Crain, 22-year-old music teacher of East Aurora, N. Y.

She said she had seen the Crain girl at Mansfield college when she visited there with Freda.

SAW TWO TOGETHER

Another time she said she saw Margaret Crain in the back yard of the Edwards home. It was night.

"I heard a voice say: 'Honey, it's too hot. Please don't boss me.'"

"I looked out (the Edwards and McKechnie houses adjoin) and there was Margaret Crain with her hand on Bobby's shoulders. I was surprised. Freda, at this time, was away from the house."

Mrs. McKechnie then lowered her voice and told of the change in the physical condition of her daughter, a few weeks before she was found dead in the waters of Harvey's Lake.

"She seemed depressed," testified Mrs. McKechnie. "She lost her appetite. She seemed to be very nervous and worrying."

"I decided to take Freda to Dr. E. L. Meyers on July 23. She began taking medicine."

The mother was not aware that Freda was to become a mother.

REAR ADMIRAL RETIRES AT 64

Harley H. Christy Retires From Navy After Many Years of Service.

Rear Admiral Harley H. Christy, native of Pickaway-co, had retired today from active service in the United States navy after serving 47 years.

Christy returned to his favorite haunts in Ashville a short time ago to visit with friends. He expects to return to this city to spend much of his time.

He had served as president of the naval examining board, until about a month ago when he went on leave.

Admiral Christy, who holds a Distinguished Service Cross, commanded a number of ships which transported or convoyed soldiers to France during the World War. It was to him that thousands of soldiers looked for safe landings.

He saw service in the Spanish-American war, was commander at various times of the Pensacola, Fla. air station, commander of the control force and commander of the 15th district, from which post he was promoted to president of the examining board.

Admiral Christy, who was relieved August 1, was born here in 1870.

His career in the service of the naval department was an interesting one.

Christy is a cousin of Mrs. Jay Wall, Watt-st., and of Mrs. E. E. Wolf, N. Court-st.

PARALYSIS SURVEY PLANNED IN COUNTY

A county survey for infantile paralysis will be made in Pickaway-co Wednesday and Thursday, October 11 and 12, it was announced Monday by Walter J. Marion, general chairman of the county committee appointed by the Ohio executive committee on the state survey of infantile paralysis.

This survey is being made in every county in the state at the same time so that a complete record will be available. A check will also be made on the condition of all persons known to have been afflicted with the disease in recent years. This survey will be made through the schools with the cooperation of George D. McDowell, county chairman, and the county schools with E. L. Daley getting the information from the city schools.

According to Dr. Charles Beale there have been fourteen cases recorded in Pickaway-co since 1928 and the majority of these were cases during the epidemic in 1930. At the present time there are no known cases. Any assistance given by the citizens of the city and county will be appreciated in making this survey.

The county committee, of which Walter Marion is general chairman is comprised of George McDowell, county chairman, Frank A. Lynch, secretary, E. L. Daley, Dr. Charles Beale, Harry Bartholomew, and K. J. Hermann.

Dr. and Mrs. R. F. Lilly, Watt-st., spent Sunday in Dayton, dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Graves.

Four Prisoners Escape Cuyahoga Workhouse

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—Four prisoners pried their way from the "unruly" section of the Warrensville workhouse, near here, today and beat and gagged a guard, but were captured by other guards as they lowered themselves to the ground on a rope made of bed sheets.

John S. Huismans, in charge of the workhouse at night, said the four worked their way out of their cell with a home-made screw driver. Then they overpowered William Harmon, night guard, and locked him in the cell, bound with rope they had hidden.

Chance as Detective

HOW often chance plays the leading role in detective work is illustrated in the arrest of the suspected chief figure in the Lindbergh kidnapping and murder.

The nation's best detective minds—federal, state and local—had been at work on the Lindbergh case for more than two years. Practical-minded sleuths had run down innumerable clues. Others had exercised their faculties of deduction on one of the most puzzling crime mysteries in decades. Several suspects had been arrested at one time or another only to be released for the lack of sufficient evidence to connect them with the kidnapping.

Then came the break, not through what can be properly termed shrewd detective work but in a prosaic manner such as might occur in any case. The taking of the serial number of the gold certificates used by Colonel Lindbergh in paying the $50,000 ransom handed over to the supposed kidnappers was a routine procedure, but, if Hauptmann proves to be the actual kidnaper or if his arrest leads to the final solution of the mystery, it will have proved to be the vital factor in the investigation. It did not offer great promise at first. It soon became a public matter that the serial numbers had been taken, which placed the kidnappers on guard in connection with spending any of the ransom money. Several of the bills, however, eventually were found, but the task of tracing the passers proved an impossible one to the nation's master detective minds.

Then, almost out of a clear sky, came the incident at the New York filling station where Hauptmann paid for gasoline with one of the ransom bills. It is doubtful if the filling station attendant would have taken particular notice of this had it not been that the private possession of gold notes had been made unlawful. His suspicious nature was aroused, and this caused him to report the incident to the police after writing down the number of the passer's automobile license.

From the police standpoint, luck, rather than shrewd detective work, gave Hauptmann into the hands of the authorities. This, nevertheless, doesn't mean that the federal agents and police who took part in the investigation are not deserving of credit. Much hard work had been done on the case by them. Despite slow and uncertain progress in solving the case, they had refused to give up and remained as vigilant as in the early days of the investigation. This vigilance was an important element in what may prove to be the answer to the question that had puzzled them for more than two years. Chance, nevertheless, seems to have been the nemesis in the case of the German carpenter who now stands charged with the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Regrettable

AMERICANS generally, we believe, will regret the bickerings that marked the latest America's cup race.

Although yacht racing, because of its costliness and the fact that only a comparatively small part of the public is enabled to view it, lacks the popularity that attaches to many other sports, the contests for the America's cup have come to hold wide and genuine interest among Americans. This is due in no small measure to the good sportsmanship that has, on both sides, featured the contests.

The late Sir Thomas Lipton, who met repeated failure in his efforts to take the trophy back to England, typified almost the ideal in good sportsmanship. It was no secret that in the last races in which he participated a large number of Americans really hoped he would be the victor.

The latest contest was the first in which more than one protest had been heard. Three were registered in two of the races. Thomas O. M. Sopwith, owner of the challenger, appears to have been a little untactful in voicing his disappointment over the rulings of the race committee which held against him. This he attempted to correct later in a statement asserting that "we take home with us to England a very pleasant recollection of the sporting attitude of the American public," and making it clear that any criticism he had was directed only at the race committee.

They can't beat swords into plowshares while there is so much profit in munitions shares.

If he seems the worst bored man at the party, it isn't polite to tell him how bored you are. He's the host.

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

SYNOPSIS

Seifert Vail, former opera singer, is stabbed to death in Lakeside Cottage of exclusive Sherwood Forest Sanatorium. Vail brooded constantly over his wife's death. He continuously played the phonograph record "Waiting For You," his wedding theme song in his own voice. This record was playing at the time of his death. A maid discovered Vail's body when she went into his room to turn off the record. Willis Clendening, Milton Cross and James Ruxton, the millionaire, shared the cottage with Vail. Ruxton's favorite nephew and heir, Loren Ruxton, and Dr. John Calvert are rivals for the affections of Sue Faraday, a nurse. Mark Hillyer, the playwright, crippled from arthritis and bored by the monotony of sanatorium life, welcomes a little excitement. He sends his secretary, Bob Fowler, to investigate the trouble at Lakeside Cottage. It is discovered that Vail's room has a private entrance which opens directly on the grounds.

CHAPTER VII

I was about to remark that the door was singularly convenient for the murderer when Dr. Calvert came out of Vail's room. His shoulders were hunched and his face was grim. It seemed to me also that he looked bewildered as well as troubled.

"The sheriff's a long time getting here," he remarked. No one answered and he sat down and stared gloomily at his white shoes. Presently he asked, "The phonograph started at 3:30, didn't it?"

"I did, Ruxton answered. 'I know because I did not sleep.'

"You didn't?" Calvert asked eagerly. He leaned forward and frowned with anxiety asked slowly, "Did you hear any unusual sounds during rest period?"

"No," Ruxton answered. "You see, my room is across the living room and at the other end of the cottage from poor Vail's."

Calvert glanced toward the door next to Vail's. The sounds of crying from that room had ceased. "Did Felipa say whether she heard anything?"

"She threw a fit when she found Vail dead," Clendening answered. "She ran out screaming and when Mr. Ruxton and I came out of Vail's room she was in her own room, crying 'We let her alone.'"

"But doctor," I said, "Vail must have been killed while the phonograph was playing, wasn't he? Who else but the murderer could have started it?"

"That's what I've been asking myself," he said.

James Ruxton leaned forward. "What do you mean?" he asked. "The physician answered slowly, as though he were weighing every word."

"I arrived at 3:50 approximately. At that time rigor mortis had already set in. One of Vail's wounds bled profusely, and his pajamas and the lower sheet had been soaked with blood. He paused and his eyes swept our listening semicircle."

"The blood is almost dry," Vail had been dead, I should say, approximately an hour when the phonograph started playing."

It was very hot in the living room, but I shivered. Clendening's face had become pale and his breath came in short, rapid gasps. James Ruxton was the first to speak.

"Why was the phonograph started, then, and who started it? Surely the murderer would not stay in Vail's room for more than an hour, and then attract attention to his presence!"

I wish I could tell you, Mr. Ruxton, Calvert said, "but I don't know. It's completely beyond my understanding."

We all started at a shrill noise and then laughed, realizing that a car with unrolled brakes had stopped outside the cottage. Dr. Calvert rose and opened the front door. Three men came up the steps and crossed the porch. The leader, a large powerfully muscled man who was beginning to get fat, said in a loud voice, "Afternoon, doctor. I hear you had some trouble here."

"I'm glad to see you, sheriff," the doctor answered. "Come in, please."

Dave Finn, the sheriff, stooped coming through the door and then, taking off his dirty Panama hat, looked at the three of us and said, "Afternoon, gentlemen. A hot day, ain't it?"

"If he does his duty, the sanna come in Vail's room." He beckoned the other man and the two of them, with the doctor, went into the austere chamber where Vail had been murdered. The deputy Simpson went to the telephone and made his call. When he had finished and had followed them, I remarked, "The sheriff seems worried."

"He'll be more than worried before he cleans this up, if he ever does," Clendening said, chuckling. "He's in a spot. He wants to run for the Legislature, and he knows how important Sherwood Forest is in the politics of this county, so he's scared to death he's going to get in wrong."

"If he does his duty, the sanna come in Vail's room." He beckoned the other man and the two of them, with the doctor, went into the austere chamber where Vail had been murdered. The deputy Simpson went to the telephone and made his call. When he had finished and had followed them, I remarked, "The sheriff seems worried."

"Felipa threw a fit when she found Vail dead," Clendening answered. "She ran out screaming."

The other two men, his deputies, followed him in and stood by awkwardly. Dr. Calvert introduced us to the sheriff and then turned to him and briefly told him of Seifert Vail's murder. Describing the manner of his death, he said:

"He was stabbed twice in the left side and one of the wounds appears to have pierced the heart. There are no indications of a struggle, so it's probable that Vail lost consciousness quickly from an internal hemorrhage or pleural shock. His mouth is bruised, as though the murderer had covered his mouth with one hand, possibly a hand on which he wore a ring."

He spoke dispassionately, but as I listened I felt a shiver of fear at the thought of the singer dying in that stuffy room with a hand gagging him. Finn listened, his small blue eyes narrowed intently. He shifted uneasily on his feet and appeared uncomfortable.

"I'll take a look at the remains," he said when the doctor had finished. He turned to his deputies. "Simpson," he said to one of them, "call Jenn, the photographer, and tell him to come up with his camera and some flashlight powder. Then torium will certainly cooperate with him," I said.

"If he does it quickly enough, maybe," Clendening said. "You don't think the 'san' wants this investigation dragged out and played up by the newspapers, do you?"

It's up to Finn to hush it up as much as he can and get the murderer in a hurry."

From inside Vail's room came Finn's heavy voice, raised in anxious emphasis, "Are you sure of that, Doc? Are you certain of that time?"

"You see," Clendening said, "Calvert's just broken the bad news about the phonograph."

Accidental Poisoning Is a Constant Home Menace

Children Usually Victims of "Candy" Pills and Drugs, Says Authority, Urging Caution

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

Dr. Copeland

FATALITIES from strychnine poisoning represent the gravest menace to children. In many cases the child was attracted by colored pills or chocolate-covered tablets, often in the form of laxative medicines. As a rule these pills contain strychnine. Reports state that many a child has swallowed a handful or more of these innocent looking tablets and, of course, has been the victim of a serious attack of strychnine poisoning.

Antidote for Poisoning
Strychnine is an alkaloid, a common ingredient of laxative medicines and other beneficial remedies. If taken in small doses it is harmless. In large amounts it is dangerous, leading to prompt poisoning that may result in death.

The victim of strychnine poisoning is seized with violent convulsions. He has great difficulty in breathing and appears extremely ill. Unless proper medical attention is given at once the condition proves fatal. The sufferer should always be taken to a hospital where more satisfactory treatment can be used.

While awaiting the arrival of a physician, if you are familiar with the antidote of the poison taken, give it immediately. If you do not know the antidote, give the white of egg, milk or strong tea. Encourage vomiting. This can often be accomplished by giving lukewarm water mixed with a teaspoon of mustard or salt. Repeat the dose every ten minutes until vomiting occurs.

Laxative Pills
The American Medical association has urged the prohibition of the manufacture of pills containing strychnine. It has also recommended that sales of this drug be limited in quantity and only obtainable in small amounts. It is probable that within a short time suitable legislation will be passed that will guard against the danger of strychnine poisoning. Until then every effort should be made to prevent this serious catastrophe.

Laxative pills and all medicines that contain strychnine should be kept beyond the reach of children. Never keep medicines for an indefinite time. Discard them when you are through using them. They become valueless and clutter up the cabinet. Bear in mind that many serious cases of poisoning can be traced to the careless practice of reaching for a medicine bottle in the dark and getting the wrong one.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. G. S. Q.—My mother has had attacks from gall stones since last November, what would you advise? 2: What do you advise for liver spots? 3: I have some hair on my face and upper lip. I pull them out but they seem to increase. Will you please tell me what to do?

A.—She should take simple foods. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. 2: This is due to faulty elimination. Avoid constipation. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. 3: Fresh peroxide of hydrogen will bleach the hair and make it less noticeable. For full particulars restate your question and self a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

M. E. Q.—How soon after birth can a baby born with a "hair lip" have it taken care of?

A.—This can only be determined by the physician who is familiar with the details in the case. It would be wise to consult your own physician. (Copyright, 1934, K. F. S., Inc.)

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

Jean Muir is discovering that being a near screen-star has certain disadvantages, as well as its well known advantages.

One of the disadvantages, she feels, is that the work leaves her comparatively little time for exercise.

To remedy this, she walked to work—three miles, each morning, from her apartment in Hollywood to the Warner Bros. studio while working on the production of "As the Earth Turns," an epic of New England rural life now showing at the Grand Theatre.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Fast fun, variety and hilarious action characterize the spontaneous comedy "Here Comes the Groom," which opens tonight at the Cliftona Theatre.

Jack Haley, Mary Boland, Neil Hamilton, Patricia Ellis, Isabel Jewell, Sidney Toler and Larry Gray are the principal players. Edward Sedgwick directed the film for Charles R. Rogers, independent producer at the Paramount studios.

"Here Comes the Groom" is the hilarious story of a goofy piccolo

LETTERS TO EDITOR

"Letter to the editor:—

I notice in your edition of Oct. 1st you state the first Pumpkin Show was originated by West Main Street business men and was held on West Main Street. The show has now been moved to East Main Street and Court Street. What is considered wrong with West Main Street and its merchants? Why can't at least part of the show be held where it started back thirty one years ago? The buildings are just as good and the street as wide as either East Main or Court.

Marian Martin Pattern

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart Included.

PATTERN 9167

This slenderizing dress is perfect for college, business or town wear. The wide revers of the collar are particularly new and the simplicity of the blouse is relieved by the cunning jabot and the interesting detail at the cuffs. The skirt, paneled in front, is very smart and the inverted pleat in the back gives plenty of room for autumn jaunts. This model would be chic made up in metal-flecked rough wool. The pattern is so simple that even nervous beginners should screw up their courage and get to work—and they'll succeed—they can't help it!

Pattern 9167 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 5/8 yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

THE FALL AND WINTER ISSUE of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK is now off the press. It is big fashion news... and delightful reading... filled with stunning and easy-to-make patterns for street and house dresses, blouses, skirts, lingerie, sports clothes... all the essentials of a smart outfit for matron, maiden or little child. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a big sign on the front of the grocery store that said, "Fresh Paint," but Mrs. Gallups came in and raised Cain with the grocer anyhow. She showed him how she ruined her dress with the paint, and she said somebody'd got to pay for it.

The grocer was just as polite as he could be, but he didn't like the idea of buying new dresses for ladies that he wasn't married to when his own wife wanted dresses so bad.

"It's rotten luck!" says the grocer. "But of course you saw the sign that said 'Fresh Paint,' didn't you?"

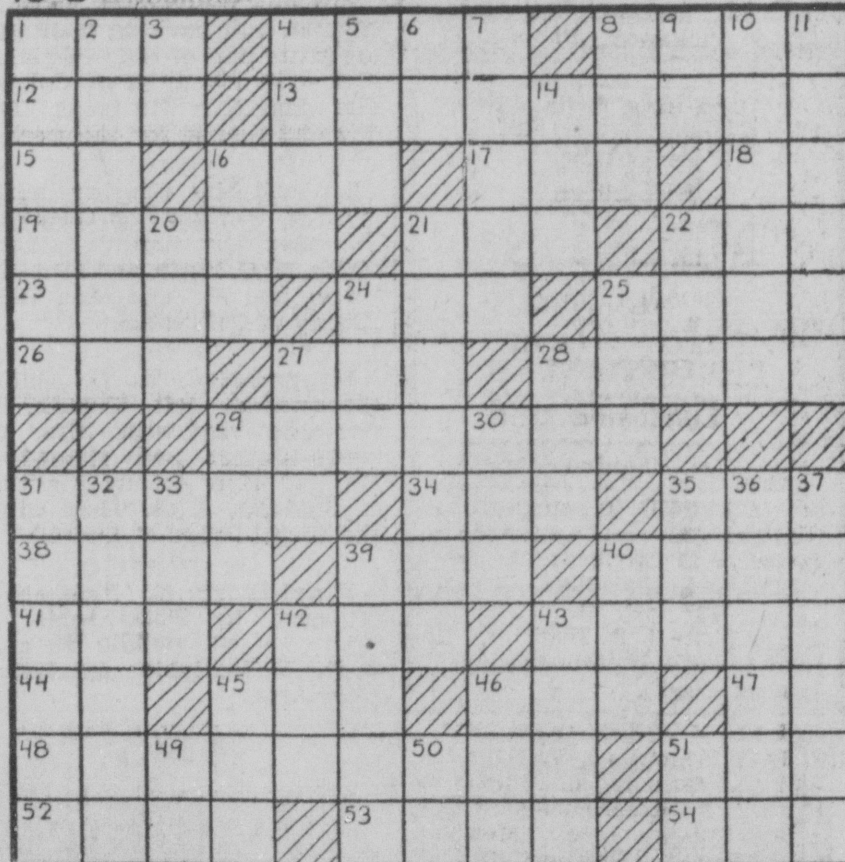

"Yes, I saw it, but what does that mean? Do you suppose I pay any attention to your fresh signs? Didn't you have another sign there that said 'Fresh Eggs' and don't I know that your eggs are always four weeks old? If your paint wasn't any fresher than your eggs, my dress wouldn't have got smeared. You'll have to come across with a new dress, Mister Grocer!"

Ford Dealers See 1934 World's Fair

Approximately 250 Ford dealers, families and guests from the Cincinnati Branch of the Ford Motor Company are shown above in front of the Ford Exposition Building on the grounds of a Century of Progress in Chicago, where they spent two days as guests of the Ford company. The dealers, from Ohio, Indiana, Ken-

John Winant, New Hampshire Governor who chairmanned Roosevelt's Textile Board, is considered a certain bet for the Senate when the term of unexpired Sen. Henry Keyes expires in 1935.

Winant, a close friend of the President and once headmaster of St. Paul's School, is gaunt and gangling, has a bashful, Abe Lincoln manner of delivering speeches.

A New England aristocrat, he has leftest ideas of the Roosevelt brand. In the New Hampshire Senate he was asked by the bosses who helped elect him to introduce certain reactionary bills. To most newcomers this was considered a great honor. Winant, however, went through the unusual procedure of reading the bills.

He refused to introduce them.

Faith Baldwin Sees the Creation of a Marian Martin Pattern

The Famous Novelist Takes You Here, Step by Step, Through the Great Organization Which Serves As a "Paris" and "Fifth Avenue" Style Center for Tens of Thousands of Women

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Sky-Scraper," "White Collar Girl" and other famous best-selling novels.

THE other day, under delightful escort, I was taken through the building which houses a great pattern service, the Marian Martin patterns so popular with the women who read this newspaper. Although I myself cannot sew a fine—or even a straight seam—I have observed with great interest the sketches of frocks shown in the newspaper pattern service and have often wondered how such a far flung

A Dressmaking Expert Shows Miss Faith Baldwin (at right) Precisely How Marian Martin Styles Are Made Up in Muslin Before Being Submitted for the Final Inspection of the Creator. This Step Permits Early Analysis of the Pattern as to Ease of Making and Economy of Material to Be Used.

The Dressmaker and the Grader Make a Careful Checkup on the Model for Comparison With the Actual Sketch to Be Presented in the Newspaper.

and important business was conducted. Well, now I know!

I went from floor to floor in this building, and watched the pattern in the making, from the moment of its inception as a design to the moment of its leaving the building, neatly folded in an envelope and addressed to the woman who had ordered it by mail. That woman is duplicated by hundreds and by thousands and lives in just about every city, town and village in every state in the Union.

The charming, blue-eyed personality of Marian Martin dominates the scene. In her office she creates styles, she makes the sketch, she indicates fabrics and color and that sketch is sent to the art department to be turned into the pretty, trim, and very real girl or woman who looks at you, in her attractive frock, from the pages of your newspaper. It also goes to the dressmaking department where, by the method of cutting out the master pattern which is peculiar to this pattern house alone, the pattern is assured an absolute accuracy.

This master pattern is of heavy paper, and when it is completed is reproduced with perfect exactness in tissue paper copies which are the actual patterns. Simultaneously machines are printing the written instructions for this particular pattern, amply illustrated with drawings of the frock in the actual making, which make the pattern absolutely fool proof.

Pattern and instruction meet one another in an envelope, which by another brilliant method is so addressed that there is never a mistake in transcription, and mailed immediately to the woman who has ordered it. I would like you to consider the care in every step of this operation. So careful is it that Mrs. Blank who has ordered a size 18 and a certain pattern number, gets just that, and in an amazingly brief length of time . . . she does not get size 20 or size 14. She gets what she ordered.

There are numberless methods employed in the making and sending out of these patterns which belong to the business itself and of which I cannot tell you in detail. But I think I must tell you that I was so impressed by the swift and accurate efficiency of the entire procedure that I have talked about little else since the hours I spent in the pattern house.

Patterns Waiting to Be Mailed to the Readers of This Newspaper. The Marian Martin Mailing Service Has All the Efficiency of the United States Post Office, Enabling the Employees to Fill and Mail Orders on the Day of Receipt.

I watched the first sketch being drawn, I saw the copy for the final newspaper version being written, I saw the dresses being made in their muslin version and the master pattern in the process of cutting. I saw the envelopes being addressed to the women who had ordered the patterns; I saw them sealed and tied in bundles ready for the mails and I invaded the art department where in a sunny large windowed room the girls sat behind their drawing boards and completed the sketches for newspaper use.

There are as you see several sides to this business. There is the important part which gets the daily completed sketch to the newspaper and the other part which makes the patterns of that sketch and has them ready to send out to all those who write and ask for it.

There are other cogs in the machine. One cog especially interested me. This was a pretty and serene girl who sat at her own desk and dealt with mistakes and complaints and was still not in the least discouraged over her sex, as well she might be.

For there are women who send for a certain pattern and who forget to mention the size they want; or who send for the size they want and forget to include their names and addresses; or who send size and number and name and address but do not enclose the necessary small coins or stamps; or who do everything else correctly but neglect sending the number of the pattern itself! With such letters this pretty girl deals, and she must be able to tell these women why she has not been able to send their patterns. Besides these there are the other women, not, I am glad to say, many, who through some fault of their own have made a mistake in following the simple clear rules which come to them with every pattern and therefore are disappointed in the result.

There are other letters. Dozens and dozens of them. I was permitted to read a few and they created a warmth about my heart and a catch at my throat. Here was a letter from a girl whose mother makes the clothes for all the family. Her sister was to be married, and would Marian Martin advise her if such-and-such a pattern in such-and-such a material was proper and would it be becoming . . . and what would she, as maid of honor, wear?

Here was a woman who made all of her own frocks from the Marian Martin patterns and who could not get along without them. She had made three dresses for a friend, she wished to make more. She had never done any sewing until recent years, but thanks to this service she was well and becomingly dressed and at the minimum cost. Here another woman who had used the patterns wrote to tell her age and height and weight and coloring. She wanted advice about materials, and she wanted advice about a hair cut and even the color of her shoes! All these letters are answered promptly and faithfully and so, you see, the pattern service does not entirely confine itself to patterns of dresses, it goes further and sends the inquirer in city or town or village, or on a lonely farm or ranch, the patterns for living, the patterns even of behavior which some woman, puzzled over a personal problem, has demanded . . . and which she will receive.

Fascinating as were the actual business details, thrilling as I found the efficient and accurate working of a great machine, impressed as I was by the atmosphere which pervades this business, the happy atmosphere which seemed almost tangible among the employees, I was more excited by the possibilities of the magic of patterns. I hadn't thought much about women sewing. In my own time, I have seen the fad for family dressmakers wax and wane and the steady demand for ready-made clothes take its place. I had given very little thought to the women who like to make their own clothes and those of their children and to the women who are forced to do the family sewing because of lack of income. I hadn't given a thought to the thousands upon thousands of women who with the help of a sewing machine, and carefully purchased material, clothe themselves and their daughters smartly and well through the years and the seasons.

These are the women to whom the pattern service comes as a friend. They may look at the sketch of the frock which is furnished them by the newspaper and so accurate a sketch is it that they will know what they will look like in that particular frock. They will order the pattern, they will buy the material. And then they will make the dress. They are successful, I imagine, about ninety-nine per cent of the time. They are proud of their success, they send Marian Martin their snapshots in the very dresses they have made.

I asked Miss Martin, idly, if she wouldn't love to see her dresses made up in material other than muslin. She looked at me in astonishment. "But I do see them!" she replied, "often and often, hundreds of them, every day in the street!" And I realized that, of course, she did. Wherever she goes she must see her very own frocks, the styles she created, on the back of some slim girl or matronly older woman, who passed her by, unknowing, on road or pavement.

Miss Martin's frocks are right and they are wearable. She has a soft spot in her heart for the large woman as well as for the slim young girl who wants to dress smartly and to her own advantage.

Marian Martin had clothes sense from the time she was a little girl in Philadelphia. She loves clothes and she designs them, every day of her life. And these designs, springing from the creative mind of a charming, beautiful woman are picked into patterns and sent around the earth.

There is magic in these patterns . . . can't you see it? By their help a girl, living miles away from retail stores, or a woman whose income is so small that she can't dream of "shopping" can be suitably and attractively clad. What this means to the housewife, the youngster in high school, the girl dreaming of her first love, the grandmother whose life into old age is still occupied, there are no words to tell.

WALLACE, BEAUTY PARADE TO DRAW THROING

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fate of Section 7A Now Up to Supreme Court in Houde-Union Controversy

WASHINGTON—The real struggle over the New Deal's labor policies is not being waged on the picket line, nor around the arbitration table.

These clashes are spectacular and dramatic. But the final decision on labor's legal right to organize in independent unions for "collective bargaining" will not be determined on these battle fronts.

It will be made in the quiet session of the United States Supreme Court.

That is why industry, labor, and the Administration have their eyes glued on what has already come to be known as the "Houde case"—likely to become the cause celebre of current labor history.

This case grew out of a ruling by the National Labor Relations Board several weeks ago ordering the Houde Engineering Company of Buffalo, N. Y., to recognize the independent union to which a majority of its employees belong.

The NLRB based its action on an interpretation of the famous Section 7a upholding the demand of labor to organize unions for collective bargaining.

The Houde company defied the NLRB, refused to abide by its ruling.

The NLRB requested the NRA to "jerk" its Blue Eagle, which was done. It also requested the Department of Justice to prosecute.

This court test is now in the making. At stake is the fate of the President's labor policy. If the NLRB is upheld, the decision will be epochal in the history of American labor. If the NLRB is reversed, labor unionists will demand new legislation of Roosevelt.

Baldy

George E. Allen, Washington's dinner "Dinner" Commissioner, is bald.

While his hair was falling out he was much disturbed, resorted to innumerable remedies. But to no avail.

Recently a friend asked him if he was still fretting about his baldness.

"None," Allen replied. "I gave up. I tried everything. But when I had a hair cut, I discovered I had a bald spot. I decided the best thing was to cooperate and get it over with. I shaved in and began pulling it out."

Auto War

Three of the biggest producers in the auto industry are waging a hammer and tongs war behind the scenes.

The controversy is not directly connected with the motor vehicle business—a continuation of a long-standing commercial feud. There is big money involved.

The dispute revolves about RUC, a mutual depositors of the First National Bank of Detroit, the largest in the world.

Under Jones' scheme, the RUC would advance $83,000,000 to finance a 20 per cent "dividend" to all depositors, but only if a majority of the big depositors agreed in advance to turn back 10 per cent of their share so that all depositors with accounts of $300, or less, could be paid in full.

Three of the biggest depositors are Henry Ford, General Motors, and Chrysler Motor Co.

Ford, with $25,000,000 frozen in the bank, is willing to accept the Jones proposal.

But General Motors and Chrysler—his bitter competitors—are yet to agree.

Jones made a hurried trip to the auto city last week in an effort to

GRAND JURORS HOLD SIX FOR COURT TRIAL

Dozen Charges Ignored as October Session Comes To Its End

HEAR 40 WITNESSES

Arraignment Expected Before End Of Week

Six persons were indicted and 12 charges were ignored by the October grand jury which concluded its one and one-half day session at noon Tuesday. Forty witnesses were questioned by Prosecutor Ray W. Davis.

J. E. Ward was foreman of the jury.

Arraignment of the persons against whom true bills were returned will probably be held Friday or Saturday in Judge J. W. Adkins' court.

The six indicted were: Forrest Roseboom, on two counts of forgery. He allegedly signed the name of Edward Clendennen to a check made payable to Harry Jones.

Thelma Creason, for grand larceny by theft of clothing from Parrett's store.

Jack Cox, for grand larceny on the same charge.

Frank Perry, on a statutory offense involving a Perry-two youth.

Robert Shively, for burglary and grand larceny of the home of J. I. Smith.

Edwin Lewis, for embezzlement of $25.50 from Charles Caskey.

Cases ignored were against: F. E. Corkwell and John Harwood, assault; Mrs. Tom Ramsey, petit larceny; James Huffer, embezzlement; Albert Kneec, Paris Keaton, Stanley and Marie Goodman, Sam Anderson, and Milton Smallwood, assault and battery; James Creason, grand larceny; Clara Moore, embezzlement.

The jurors visited the county jail and praised the sheriff's office for its clean and sanitary condition.

C. of C. Planning Novel Pumpkin Show Souvenir

"Wooden Nickels" Placed In Circulation; Redeemable At Full Value.

The Pumpkin Show has never had an official souvenir and this year the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a novel souvenir and a novel method of its distribution.

The idea hinges upon the expression "don't take any wooden nickels" and the souvenir is in the form of a "wooden nickel." Its novelty lies in the fact that the souvenir can be used as money at the concessions of the Pumpkin Show and the Chamber of Commerce is guaranteeing the redemption of the "wooden nickels" that are not retained as souvenirs.

All concessions at the Pumpkin Show will accept the "wooden nickels" as payment for rides and amusements at their "nickel" value and persons desiring to ride on the rides or other amusements to members of their families simply go to the booth which will be located at Court and Main streets as many wooden nickels as they want to use and turn these over to the family and they use them at the amusements.

The "wooden nickel" will be produced if desired at the booth where they are sold and provision will be made for their redemption up to Monday following the Show.

The "wooden nickels" are an all-Circleville product. The wood material came from the T. R. Brown mill and the work of making the "nickels" is being done at the "Kinky Kit" Division of the M. G. Goller Sons Company.

The souvenir is of wood and about the size of half a dollar and mounted on both sides with lettering and pictures of the traditional Snow pumpkin which make it a very desirable keep sake. A souvenir of the 1934 Pumpkin Show is ready to get your "wooden nickels" at the Chamber of Commerce booth.

FATHER PASSES AWAY

Elmer Parr, 8, Scioto-st. inter-type operator for The Herald, received word Tuesday morning that his father died suddenly Monday at his home in Lynchburg.

Plan for School Parade Outlined by Instructors

Expected to be the feature Pumpkin Show event since the last school parade in 1928, officials of Circleville schools headed by Superintendent E. L. Daley, who is ably assisted by teachers in the various schools, are gradually completing their plans for this year's parade which is scheduled Thursday afternoon. It is hoped to have the procession in motion at exactly 2 o'clock, as scheduled on the official program.

The parade will form on E. Main-st. move west to Scioto-st., north on Scioto to High, east on High to Court and south on Court to Mound, where it will disband.

Considering the small amount of time the school teachers and principals have had in which to prepare for the big event much progress has been made. All will be ready when parade time arrives.

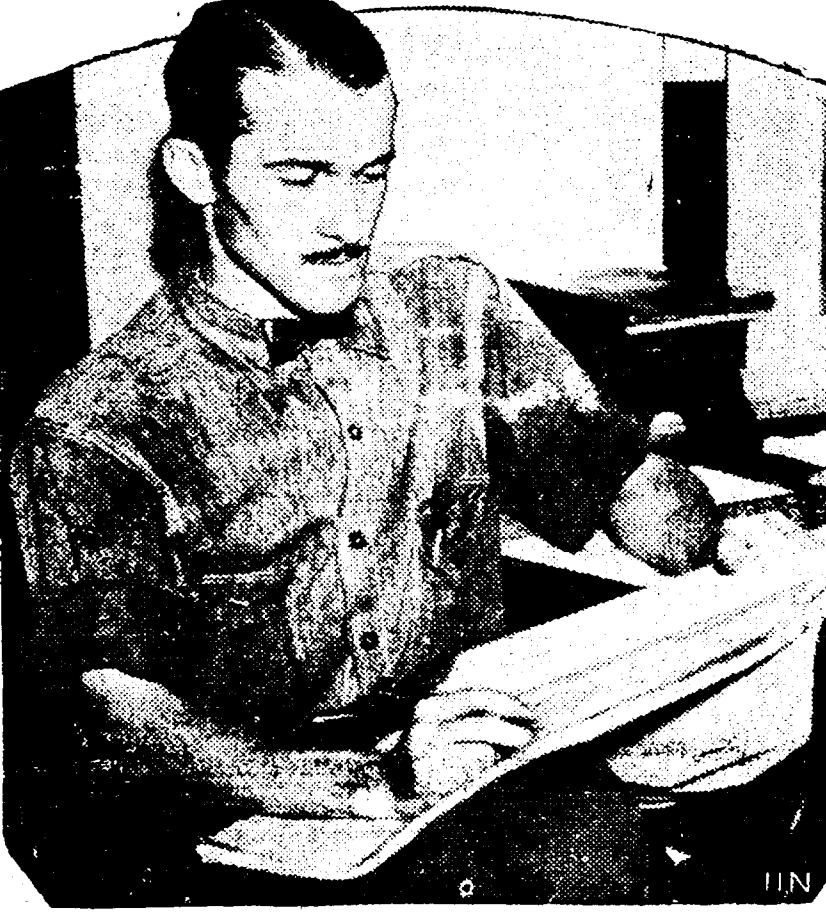

"OCCUPATIONS" THEME

The general theme carried out this year is "occupations." The order of march and a description of what each grade and class will portray was disclosed at a meeting of the various school leaders in Mr. Daley's office Monday afternoon.

The American Legion drum corps, augmented by members of the Chillicothe unit, will "blast" the way with Pumpkin Show and city officials next in line, to be followed by the Hallsville band. The board of education will precede the first part of the actual school parade, a decorated automobile from the Jones and Stout garage carrying a banner announcing the general theme of the elementary grades. Another sign will be seen in the line of march at each change in the grades to tell what the next is portraying.

The first grades' theme is dairying. The girls of all the first grades will be dressed as milk maids. Franklin boys will represent butter, being dressed in yellow and carrying baskets pretending to be delivering butter. Continued On Page Two

Wheat Sowing Underway in Pickaway-co Tuesday

Monday, Oct. 1, was the fly-free date in Pickaway-co but because of the heavy rain Saturday the soil was too wet to do much wheat sowing. Many farmers were busy in their fields today while others will be sowing during the remainder of the week.

October 1 had been set as the date to begin sowing wheat in this section to avoid damage by Hessian fly, and farmers have been busy for the last week disk and preparing the seedbed. According to the county is expected to be increased because of revisions in the government crop reduction program.

Sowing on or after this date gives the farmer ample assurance that cold weather will destroy autumn broods of the Hessian flies before the wheat emerges from the ground, according to County Agricultural Agent F. K. Blair. "Wheat destruction by the flies is not to be feared. In the spring if crops are given a good start by proper ground tillage and applications of generous quantities of fertilizer," Blair said.

Fl-free dates are not completely fly-free in some seasons, but they are safe enough to eliminate most of the risk of fly injury. Larvae, which develop in wheat sown after these dates, rarely mature before winter sets in according to Blair.

Although eye may be used early without danger of seriously becoming infested with flies early sown winter barley may become heavily infested. Some wheat already has been sown.

COUNTY GETS $9,323 FUND

State's Relief Expenditures Cut $161,192; More Families On Relief.

A sum of $9,323 will be sent to Pickaway-co by the state relief commission for October. It was disclosed today.

The money will be divided into the following funds:

Direct relief, $5,262; Work projects, $2,056; Emergency schools, $375; Transients, $15; FERA projects for "white colored" unemployed, $175.

The October budget of the state is $161,192 less than allotted for the five weeks period ending October 4. At the same time, it was estimated that 10,418 families would require aid during October as compared with 18,291 in September.

The total amount to be dispensed by the state during the month is $8,091,555. More than half is for direct relief.

GIRL'S MOTHER GOES ON STAND

Tells of Friendship Between Dead Daughter and Boy Accused of Death.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 2.—Mrs. George McKechie, mother of Freda, today took the stand as the first state witness at the "American tragedy" murder trial of 21-year-old Bobby Edwards, alleged betrayer and slayer of her daughter.

Mrs. McKechie, a quiet-faced, bespectacled woman, was dressed in black with a bonnet in her dark hat.

She spoke in a clear, semi-lusky voice. She told of how the McKechies lived in Edwardsville, the colliery town, near the Edwards.

Her daughter recently celebrated her 20th birthday, she said.

"Freda was a telephone operator up until the time she died," she said, simply.

Then the mother of Freda related the details of the romance between her daughter and the handsome young mine surveyor who had a neighborhood reputation for being a ladies' man.

GAZES AT WITNESS

Through it all, Edwards faced the witness with his hands clasped before him, gazing steadfastly and intensely at Mrs. McKechie.

"Freda and Bobby went to the same church," Mrs. McKechie said. "Freda had a boy friend, George Thomas, but she gave him up for Bobby."

"Bobby used to visit Freda four and five nights a week. What did they do? Oh, Bobby would come in and just sit."

"They would go for walks and to the movies sometimes. They were

TWO DIE FROM GAS, TRY TO SAVE FOUR

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—Medical science battled today to save the life of a Cleveland mother and three of her children from the effects of deadly carbon monoxide fumes which already have snuffed out the lives of her two sons.

Howard Martin, 8, and his six-year-old brother, Ronald, died at St. Johns hospital here yesterday afternoon from the poison gases, which escaped into the Martin home from a broken water heater flue.

Blood transfusions were given to the mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, 33, today at the hospital in an attempt to save her life. She was reported in a semi-conscious condition.

Blood donors were called early today for Curtis, 13, another son, who was still unconscious from the gas. After the transfusion, physicians gave him an even chance of recovery.

A daughter, Christine, 11, was reported out of danger today.

The mother and her four children were found lying on the floor of their apartment by neighbors when smoke and the odor of burning food attracted their attention.

GAS CO. SEEKS HIGHER COURT

Approval of 55-Cent Rate To Be Asked In Ohio Supreme Court.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Suddenly shifting its tactics in an effort to retain $300,000 paid by gas consumers under protest, the Columbus Gas and Fuel company today was scheduled to enter the Ohio supreme court to obtain approval of a 55-cent gas rate ordinance.

Attorneys for the city also were expected to appear and plead for a 48-cent rate once approved by the supreme court.

Counsel for the gas company, it was recalled, once had fought the 55-cent rate but the objections were withdrawn and the gas company expressed itself willing to accept the 55-cent rate which was fixed by the public utilities commission two years ago.

The ordinance proposing the 55-cent rate expires November 12. However, if the supreme court approved the rate, the gas company would automatically retain $300,000 collected in excess of the proposed 48-cent rate. Otherwise it would be refunded to consumers.

After the rate ordinance expires next month, it was believed that the city and the company would enter into new negotiations.

OPENING DAY'S PROGRAM FULL, STARTS AT 12

Secretary of Agriculture to Talk as Near After 7:30 as Possible

PARADE IS AT 7:15

"Miss Pumpkin Show" Title Sought By Many

Circleville's thirty-first annual Pumpkin Show, destined undoubtedly to become one of the finest in recent years, opens at noon Wednesday for one of the biggest first days in many years.

Two major attractions have been arranged for the opening day, one the appearance of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, the other the beauty parade.

Mr. Wallace, a forceful member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, will speak at Main and Pickaway-sts. as near after 7:30 p. m. as possible. It is planned to construct a platform on the northeast corner with a loud speaking system installed to carry the voice of the secretary of agriculture to all corners. Farm bureau officials estimate there will be 10,000 to 15,000 persons in his audience. A number of dignitaries from all parts of the state are expected in addition to scores of farm leaders who are interested in his message concerning the government's crop policies.

NOT ON POLITICS

The speaker is brought to the city by the fact that he is emphatically asserted that he is not coming here for political purposes.

The beauty parade is on the official program for 7:15 p. m. Wednesday and will be staged accordingly. Wallace's address is expected to take place immediately following this event. Clayton G. Chaffin is in charge of the beauty parade and said today he expected to have between 12 and 20 entries. Some of the most promising girls in the city and county have entered the competition most of whom are sponsored by civic clubs or business houses. With a grand prize of $50 planned for the winner there is quite an objective.

Miss Lucille Heise, last year's "Miss Pumpkin Show" will represent the Ebert Soda Grill in the parade, it has been announced. There is still plenty of time to enter. Mr. Chaffin reports, and he hopes other business houses will see fit to sponsor contestants.

FORMS ON PICKNEY

The parade forms on Pickney-st. goes south on Scioto to Main, east on Main to Washington, on Washington to Franklin, west on Franklin to Court, and north on Court to Pickney where judging will be done.

Most of the girls will ride in automobiles while some will be on foot.

Out-of-town judges who have no acquaintance with the contestants have been selected to pick "Miss Pumpkin Show" who will preside over all parades and other general events.

Musical for the entire engagement will be provided by the American Legion drum corps, Hallsville band and both Junior and senior bands of the Public schools.

Free acts are scheduled each day at 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 10 and 11 o'clock. It behooves everyone to see them as they are because they are guaranteed to satisfy.

DETAILS ALL SET

Final details of the big show were ironed out Monday evening when directors met in the city council chamber to plan for a bigger and better show.

The office of Secretary and Board of Directors will be located in the city building, 100 W. Main-st. The office of L. T. Shuman in the city building.

INSULL BEGINS FIGHT AGAINST FRAUD CHARGE

Sixteen Others On Trial In Chicago Before Federal Judge

SEE 3-MONTHS FIGHT

Aged Financier To Take An Active Part

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—"The United States of America versus Samuel Insull."

In clear, ringing tones, this dramatically terse statement by the clerk of Judge James H.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—"I feel fine. I know I'll be vindicated."

That was Samuel Insull speaking this morning after a hearty breakfast in his modest hotel apartment, as the hour approached for the trial of himself and 16 associates on mail fraud charges. Insull ate a breakfast consisting of grape fruit, dry whole wheat toast, soft boiled egg and coffee. He said, smiling:

"I fear the length of the trial more than the outcome."

Wilkerson's court today sounded the signal for the opening of the long awaited trial of the one-time king of a crumbled utilities empire.

Detroit Baseball Crazy As Opening Game Nears

By DAVIS J. WALSH
National News Service Sports Editor

DETROIT, Oct. 2.—Almost as one man, the violent residents of this baseball crazy town arose this morning, uttered a prolonged, piercing shriek, leaped high in the air and forgot to come down. It was the day before the first world series the town had known in all of 25 years, an occasion so historic that business was practically inert and the only place where privacy was possible was inside a telephone booth.

Three hundred thousand people, it was estimated, were roaming the town looking for tickets for tomorrow's inaugural game between the Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals. Long, patient queues waited at the mutely locked and silent windows. All through the night and well into the morning, a steady flow of motor cars beat their way into town from the upper Michigan peninsula and the neighboring states of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

WHOLE TOWN FILLED
Keyed up like a concert violin by this long-deferred pennant for the Tigers and the dramatic, last day victory of the Cardinals in the National league, they came by rail, by bus line and planes and, long before noon today, the hotels were so taxed in their lobby limits that some saw fit to remove the potted palms and sundry bric-a-brac.

Nobody yet has found a way to remove a potted baseball man. The Cards, a slight favorite in the betting, made the city this morning in an overnight jump from St. Louis and will work out at Navin field later in the day. They might do well if they don't make it too much later, inasmuch as showers were forecast for late this afternoon and there was even a possibility that the first game tomorrow might have to go by default.

Accompanying the Cardinals were the Dean boys, Delirious and his brother, Panegyric, not to forget a rumor or two about the Cardinal staff.

It was figured that Delirious would win at least two of the games; whereas, if he isn't ready tomorrow, he'll do all right if he finds time thereafter to even pitch two games. He went for his last work two days ago when he won his 30th game of the year, thus earning the distinction of being the foremost pitcher of all baseball and, at the same time clinching the pennant for St. Louis with a shut-out over the Cincinnati Reds.

NEED BIG BROTHER.
Delirious, hot or cold, simply will have to be ready on the Cards if that, against a club that hits as the Tigers do. At the same time, there has been some talk for and against brother Paul for the first game, with Delirious untracking himself for the second here on Thursday and either Hallahan or Carleton obliging in the third game on Friday, opening the St. Louis end of the series.

But this being a series in which there are no off days, the best they could do with Delirious under that arrangement would be to pitch him in the second and fifth games and then forget about him, which is a bit difficult if not downright silly. In the first place, he ought to pitch the first, fourth and seventh games. In the second, he won't even forget about himself.

About This And That
BY THE SECOND GUESSER

NO MONDAY LET-DOWN
There was no Monday let-down in practice sessions of the Circleville high school football squad—A long, hard drill on tackling and blocking was the treat Coach Pete Herberholz had in store for his stalwarts Monday.

The team is preparing for a trip to Marysville Friday in which the lid will be pried off the Central Buckeye league race.

First the backs would carry the pigskin with every lineman on the squad taking a crack at them, then the linemen carried the leather—Later the ball was being snapped from center with a back carrying, two guards going out to get the end; as a result the end bore the brunt of the smacking.

It was a mighty good workout and one which should benefit the team since its tackling has not been keen.

FANS FOR CARDINALS
The consensus of local sports fans seems to be that St. Louis will win the World series because of the Dean brothers. A team which comes from behind as did the Cardinals merits the praise of the sporting world but fans should not underrate the Detroit team which has been resting on its oars for the past week waiting for the winner of the National loop to be determined. Every member of the Detroit staff is ready to go; is Dizzy Dean after working three times in six days? It is possible he will not start the series although fans would not be surprised if he hops onto that mound.

'AG' DIRECTOR SEES VICTORY FOR AAA PLAN

Farmers Marching To Polls To Decide Future of Curtailment Plans.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Dr. H. C. Ramsower, agricultural extension director at Ohio State university, today predicted a victory for the "New Deal" as farmers throughout the state today started balloting on the future of the government's corn-hog curtailment program in 1935.

At the same time, Dr. Ramsower revealed that the federal government had definitely committed itself to long-term farm planning.

75,000 TO VOTE
Dr. Ramsower said he expected that at least 75,000 Ohio farmers would be among the 1,200,000 farmers in the nation to journey to the polling places.

"I believe that they will approve the curtailment program," he predicted.

He pointed out that the 75,000 farmers in this state who had signed contracts this year will receive a total of $17,000,000.

On the ballots, which will be presented to farmers at community gatherings supervised by agricultural extension agents, two questions were written:

1. Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hog in 1935?

2. Do you favor a one-contract-per-farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936?

The latter question, according to Dr. Ramsower, indicated definitely that the government planned to carry out its farm relief plan over a long-term period.

First results of the balloting in Ohio were not expected to be completed until late this week or early next week.

Meanwhile, Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA, warned that there was danger that both the acreage and production of corn would be excessive in 1935 unless there is some adjustment program in effect.

RALLY PLANS

mun Mr. Adkins declared with Donahue and Dill to provide the only actual speeches.

Invitations have been sent to the chairman of all Democratic committees in counties of the district and Mr. Adkins hopes to fill the hall.

All the Pickaway-co Democratic organizations are cooperating to make the meeting a mammoth one.

LEBANON, Oct. 2.—Clarence J. Brown, Republican nominee for governor today had carried his campaign into his home congressional district with an attack on the state highway department.

Speaking here, Brown charged the highway department had "signally failed in its purpose." He also claimed that a million dollars a year could be saved in the department and more and better highways built.

The Republican nominee attacked the bond-interest-moratorium proposed by his Democratic opponent, Martin L. Davey, asserting that "only disaster could follow such a program."

He attacked the "treacherous growth of bureaucracy" and pointing to the increase of personnel in state government, he concluded:

"Public money that should have been spent for public improvement has been expended for salaries paid those feeding from the public trough."

LEFT-HANDER HALTS BIRDS IN 7-2 GAME

Hollingsworth Gives Four Hits As Elliott Is Chased Off the Hill.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—It was left up to young Al Hollingsworth, southpaw star, to return the Maple Leafs to the running in the little world series. He defeated the rampant Columbus Red Birds, 7-2, Monday evening with his mates driving Jumbo Elliott off the hill with an early barrage of base hits.

The series now stands two to one for the Ontonags with another game scheduled tonight. It is probable the same pitchers who started the first game will be in action, Don Brennan and Ed Greer, Lyons and Heusser were also possibilities.

Columbus got only four hits off Hollingsworth and did not score until the eighth inning when Billy Myers tripled Teachout over then scored on a fly ball. The southpaw, who goes to the Cincinnati Reds next year, fanned eight and walked three.

REAR ADMIRAL RETIRES AT 64

Harley H. Christy Retires From Navy After Many Years of Service.

Rear Admiral Harley H. Christy, native of Pickaway-co., had retired today from active service in the United States navy after serving 47 years.

Christy returned to his favorite haunts in Ashville a short time ago to visit with friends. He expects to return to this city to spend much of his time.

He had served as president of the naval examining board until about a month ago when he went on leave.

Admiral Christy, who holds a Distinguished Service Cross, commanded a number of ships which transported or convoyed soldiers to France during the World War. It was to him that thousands of soldiers looked for safe landings.

He saw service in the Spanish-American war, was commander at various times of the Pensacola, Fla., air station, commander of the control force and commander of the 15th district from which post he was promoted to president of the examining board.

Admiral Christy, who was relieved August 1, was born here in 1871.

His career in the service of the naval department was an interesting one.

Christy is a cousin of Mrs. Jay Wall, Watt-st., and of Mrs. E. E. Wolf, N. Court-st.

PARALYSIS SURVEY PLANNED IN COUNTY

A county survey for infantile paralysis will be made in Pickaway-co. Wednesday and Thursday, October 11 and 12, it was announced Monday by Walter J. Marion, general chairman of the county committee appointed by the Ohio executive committee on the state survey of infantile paralysis.

This survey is being made in every county in the state at the same time so that a complete record will be available. A check will also be made on the condition of all persons known to have been afflicted with the disease in recent years. This survey will be made through the schools with the cooperation of George D. McDowell, county chairman, and the county health officer, E. L. Daley getting the information from the city schools.

According to Dr. Charles Beale there have been fourteen cases recorded in Pickaway-co. since 1925 and the majority of these were cases during the epidemic in 1930. At the present time there are no known cases. Any assistance given by the citizens of the county will be appreciated in making this survey.

The county committee, of which Walter Marion is general chairman, is comprised of George McDowell, county chairman, Frank A. Lynch, secretary, E. L. Daley, Dr. Charles Beale, Harry Bartholmew, and K. J. Herrmann.

Dr. and Mrs. P. F. Lilly, Watt-st., spent Sunday in Dayton, dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Graves.

Four Prisoners Escape Cuyahoga Workhouse

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—Four prisoners pried their way from the "unruly" section of the Warrensville workhouse, near here, today and beat and gagged a guard, but were captured by other guards as they lowered themselves to the ground on a rope made of bed sheets.

John S. Huismans, in charge of the workhouse at night, said the four worked their way out of their cell with a home-made rope driver. Then they overpowered William Harmon, night guard, and locked him in the cell, bound with rope they had hidden.

Chance as Detective

HOW often chance plays the leading role in detective work is illustrated in the arrest of the suspected chief figure in the Lindbergh kidnapping and murder.

The nation's best detective minds—federal, state and local—had been at work on the Lindbergh case for more than two years. Practical-minded sleuths had run down innumerable clues. Others had exercised their faculties of deduction on one of the most puzzling crime mysteries in decades. Several suspects had been arrested at one time or another only to be released for the lack of sufficient evidence to connect them with the kidnapping.

Then came the break, not through what can be properly termed shrewd detective work but in a prosaic manner such as might occur in any case. The taking of the serial number of the gold certificates used by Colonel Lindbergh in paying the $50,000 ransom handed over to the supposed kidnappers was a routine procedure, but, if Hauptmann proves to be the actual kidnaper or if his arrest leads to the final solution of the mystery, it will have proved to be the vital factor in the investigation. It did not offer great promise at first. It soon became a public matter that the serial numbers had been taken, which placed the kidnappers on guard in connection with spending any of the ransom money. Several of the bills, however, eventually were found, but the task of tracing the passers proved an impossible one to the nation's master detective minds.

Then, almost out of a clear sky, came the incident at the New York filling station when Hauptmann paid for gasoline with one of the ransom bills. It is doubtful if the filling station attendant would have taken particular notice of this possession of the notes, had been made unlawful. His suspicious nature was aroused, and this caused him to report the incident to the police after writing down the number of the passer's automobile license.

From the police standpoint, luck, rather than shrewd detective work, gave Hauptmann into the hands of the authorities. This, nevertheless, doesn't mean that the federal agents and police who took part in the investigation are not deserving of credit. Much hard work had been done on the case by them. Despite slow and uncertain progress in solving the case, they had refused to give up and remained as vigilant as in the early days of the investigation. This vigilance was an important element in what may prove to be the answer to the question that had puzzled them for more than two years. Chance, nevertheless, seems to have been the nemesis in the case of the German carpenter who now stands charged with the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Regrettable

AMERICANS generally, we believe, will regret the bickerings that marked the latest America's cup race.

Although yacht racing, because of its costliness and the fact that only a comparatively small part of the public is enabled to view it, lacks the popularity that attaches to many other sports, the contests for the America's cup have come to hold wide and genuine interest among Americans. This is due in no small measure to the good sportsmanship that has, on both sides, featured the contests.

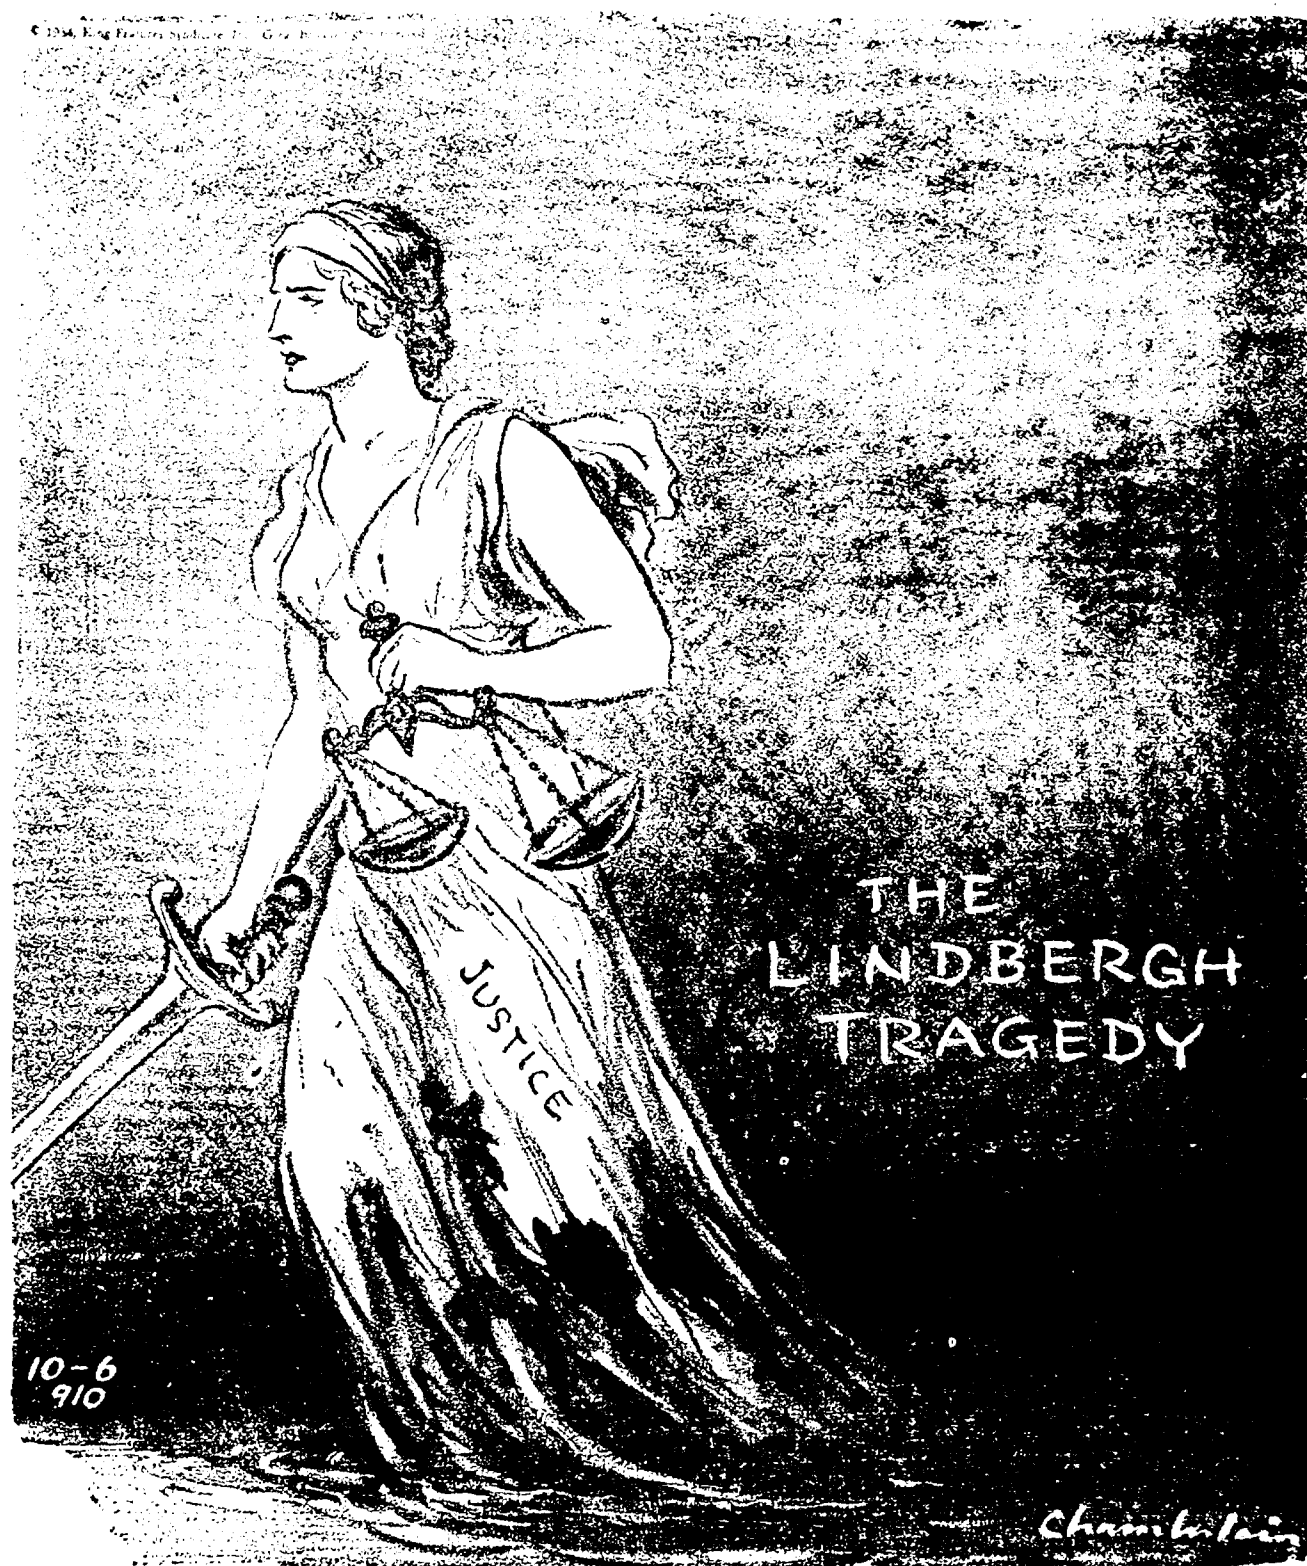

The late Sir Thomas Lipton, who met repeated failure in his efforts to take the trophy back to England, typified almost the ideal in good sportsmanship. It was no secret that in the last races in which he participated a large number of Americans really hoped he would be the victor.

The latest contest was the first in which more than one protest had been heard. Three were registered in two of the races. Thomas O. M. Sopwith, owner of the challenger, appears to have been a little untactful in voicing his disappointment over the rulings of the race committee, which held against him. This he attempted to correct later in a statement asserting that "we take home with us to England a very pleasant recollection of the sporting attitude of the American public" and making it clear that any criticism he had was directed only at the race committee.

They can't beat swords into plowshares while there is so much profit in munitions shares.

Lifting Her Head at Last

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

SYNOPSIS

Seifert Vail, former opera singer, is scabbed to death in Lakeside Cottage of exclusive Sherwood Forest Sanatorium. Vail brooded constantly over his wife's death. He continuously played the phonograph record "Waiting For You," his wedding theme song in his own voice. "Afternoon, doctor. I hear you had some trouble here," the doctor answered. "Come in, please." Dave Finn, the sheriff, stooped coming through the door and then, taking off his dirty Panama hat, looked at the three of us and said, "Afternoon, gentlemen. A hot day, ain't it?"

CHAPTER VII
I was about to remark that the door was singularly convenient for the murderer when Dr. Calvert came out of Vail's room. His shoulders were stooped and his face was grim. It seemed to me also that he looked bewildered as well as troubled.

"The sheriff's a long time getting here," he remarked. No one answered and he sat down and stared gloomily at his white shoes. "I've only been asked, 'The phonograph started at 3:30, didn't it?'"

"I did," Ruxton answered. "I know because I did not sleep."

"You didn't?" Calvert asked eagerly. He leaned forward and frowned, with anxiety asked slowly. "Did you hear any unusual sounds during rest period?"

"No," Ruxton answered. "You see, my room is across the living room and at the other end of the cottage from poor Vail's."

Calvert glanced toward the door next to Vail's. The sounds of crying from that room had ceased. "Did Felipe say whether she heard anything?"

"She threw a fit when she found Vail dead," Clendingen answered. "She ran out screaming and when Mr. Ruxton and I came out of Vail's room she was in her own room, crying. We let her alone."

"But doctor," I said, "Vail must have been killed while the phonograph was playing. Wasn't he? Who else but the murderer could have started it?"

"That's what I've been asking myself," he said. "James Ruxton leaned forward. 'What do you mean?' he asked. 'The physician answered slowly, as though he were weighing every word.'"

We all started at a shrill noise and then laughed, realizing that a car with unbraked brakes had stopped outside the cottage. Dr. Calvert rose and opened the front door. Three men came up the steps and crossed the porch. The leader, a large powerfully muscled man who was beginning to get fat, said in a loud voice, "Afternoon, doctor. I hear you had some trouble here."

"I'm glad to see you, sheriff," the doctor answered. "Come in, please."

Dave Finn, the sheriff, stooped coming through the door and then, taking off his dirty Panama hat, looked at the three of us and said, "Afternoon, gentlemen. A hot day, ain't it?"

"Felipa threw a fit when she found Vail dead," Clendingen answered. "She ran out screaming."

The other two men, his deputies, followed him in and stood by awkwardly. Dr. Calvert introduced us to the sheriff and then turned to him and briefly told him of Seifert Vail's murder. Describing the manner of his death, he said:

"He was stabbed twice in the left side and one of the wounds appeared to have pierced the heart. There are no indications of a struggle, so it's probable that Vail lost consciousness quickly from an internal hemorrhage or pleural shock. His mouth is bruised, as though the murderer had covered his mouth with one hand, possibly a hand on which he wore a ring."

He spoke despondently, but as I listened I felt a shiver of fear at the thought of the singer dying in that stuffy room with a hand gagging him. Finn listened, his small blue eyes narrowed intently. He shifted uneasily on his feet and appeared uncomfortable.

"I'll take a look at the remains," he said when the doctor had finished. "Simpson," he said to one of them, "call Jenn, the photographer, and tell him to come up with his camera and some flashlight powder. Then come in Vail's room." He beckoned the other man and the two of them, with the doctor, went into the austere chamber where Vail had been murdered. The deputy Simpson went to the telephone and made his call. When he had finished and had followed them, I remarked, "The sheriff seems worried."

"He'll be more than worried before he cleans this up, if he ever does," Clendingen said, chuckling. "He's in a spot. He wants to run for the Legislature, and he knows how important Sherwood Forest is in the politics of this county, so he's scared to death he's going to get in wrong."

"If he does his duty, the sanatorium will certainly cooperate with him," I said. "If he does it quickly enough, maybe," Clendingen said. "You don't think the 'san' wants this investigation dragged out and played up by the newspapers, do you?"

It's up to Finn to hush it up as much as he can and get the murderer in a hurry.

From inside Vail's room came Finn's heavy voice, raised in an emphasis, "Are you sure of that, Doc? Are you certain of that time?"

"You see," Clendingen said, "Calvert's just broken the bad news about the phonograph."

Accidental Poisoning Is a Constant Home Menace

Children Usually Victims of "Candy" Pills and Drugs, Says Authority, Urging Caution

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

Dr. Copeland

Fatalities from strychnine poisoning represent the gravest menace to children. In many cases the child was attracted by colored pills or chocolate-covered tablets, often in the form of laxative medicines. As a rule these pills contain strychnine. Reports state that many a child has swallowed a handful or more of these innocent looking tablets and, of course, has been the victim of a serious attack of strychnine poisoning.

Antidote for Poisoning
Strychnine is an alkaloid, a common ingredient of laxative medicines and other beneficial remedies. If taken in small doses it is harmless. In large amounts it is dangerous, leading to prompt poisoning that may result in death.

The victim of strychnine poisoning is seized with sudden convulsions. He has great difficulty in breathing and appears extremely ill. Unless proper medical attention is given at once the condition proves fatal. The sufferer should always be taken to a hospital where more satisfactory treatment can be used.

While awaiting the arrival of a physician, if you are familiar with the antidote of the poison taken, give it immediately. If you do not know the antidote, give the white of egg, milk or strong tea. Encourage vomiting. This can often be accomplished by giving lukewarm water mixed with a teaspoon of mustard or salt. Repeat the dose every ten minutes until vomiting occurs.

Label Poisons
The American Medical association has urged the prohibition of the manufacture of pills containing strychnine. It has also recommended that sales of this drug be limited in quantity and only obtainable in small amounts. It is probable that within a short time suitable legislation will be passed that will guard against the danger of strychnine poisoning. Until then every effort should be made to prevent this serious catastrophe.

Laxative pills and all medicines that contain strychnine should be kept beyond the reach of children. Never keep medicines for an indefinite time. Discard them when you are through using them. They become valueless and clutter up the cabinet. Bear in mind that many serious cases of poisoning can be traced to the careless practice of reaching for a medicine bottle in the dark and getting the wrong one.

Jean Muir is discovering that being a near screen-star has certain disadvantages, as well as its well known advantages. One of the disadvantages, she feels, is that the work leaves her comparatively little time for exercise.

To remedy this, she walked to work—three miles, each morning, from her apartment in Hollywood to the Warner Bros. studio while working on the production of "As the Earth Turns," an epic of New England rural life now showing at the Grand Theatre.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

"Letter to the editor:—I notice in your edition of Oct. 1st you state the first Pumpkin Show was originated by West Main Street business men and was held on West Main Street. The show has now been moved to East Main Street and Court Street. What is considered wrong with West Main Street and its merchants? Why can't at least part of the show be held where it started back thirty one years ago? The buildings are just as good and the street as wide as either East Main or Court."

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a big sign on the front of the grocery store that said, "Fresh Paint," but Mrs. Gall-ups came in and raised Cain with the grocer anyhow. She showed him how she ruined her dress with the paint, and she said somebody'd got to pay for it.

The grocer was just as polite as he could be, but he didn't like the idea of buying new dresses for ladies that he wasn't married to when his own wife wanted dresses so bad.

"It's rotten luck," says the grocer. "But of course you saw the sign that said 'Fresh Paint,' didn't you?"

"Yes, I saw it, but what does that mean? Do you suppose I pay any attention to your fresh signs? Didn't you have another sign there that said 'Fresh Eggs,' and don't I know that your eggs are always four weeks old? If your paint wasn't any fresher than your eggs, my dress wouldn't have got smeared. You'll have to come across with a new dress, Mister Grocer!"

effect a compromise. What luck he had, he is not telling—yet.

Stalemate

The real story of the Russian debt stalemate is in the attitude of the career boys who opposed Russian recognition in the first place. After Roosevelt had ironed out the main features of Soviet recognition last October, he turned the rest of the details over to State Department functionaries. Chief among these are Robert F. Kelley,

Ford Dealers See 1934 World's Fair

Approximately 250 Ford dealers, families and guests from the Cincinnati Branch of the Ford Motor Company are shown above in front of the Ford Exposition Building on the grounds of a Century of Progress in Chicago, where they spent two days in guests of the Ford company. The dealers, from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee, arrived by special train and heard an address by W. C. Cowling, general sales manager of the Ford Company, inspected the huge Ford Exposition and went on a tour of the 1934 World's Fair.

The man who supplied anti-Soviet ammunition to Secretaries Kellogg and Hughes. With him has worked Assistant Secretary Walton P. Moore, a charming Virginia gentleman but a novice at foreign affairs. Roosevelt intended through recognition to boost American sales to the vast market of the Soviet, but, so far, Russia is still buying from Europe.

Flying four or five miles behind the lines, it can remain almost in one place, obtain perfect observation of the enemy. The ordinary airplane is too fast for observation, the balloon too vulnerable.

The U. S. Army probably will use a lot of autogyros in the future.

'Senatorial Certainty'

John Winant, New Hampshire Governor who chairmanned Roosevelt's Textile Board, is considered a certain bet for the Senate when the term of unexpired Sen. Henry Kuyper expires in 1935. Winant, a close friend of the President and once headmaster of St. Paul's School, is gaunt and gangling, has a bashful, Abe Lincoln manner of delivering speeches.

A New England aristocrat, he has Leftist ideas of the Roosevelt brand. In the New Hampshire Senate he was asked by the bosses who helped elect him to introduce certain reactionary bills. To most newcomers this was considered a great honor. Winant, however, went through the unusual procedure of reading the bills.

He refused to introduce them.

Autogyro Observation

The Army has been making some secret but highly satisfactory experiments with the autogyro as a new method of observation for the artillery fire. It looks as if this weird sort of airplane would make an important contribution to modern warfare.

Scrap iron is used for one thing only—munitions. Japan has little iron ore of her own. The State Department has got itself into something of a hole regarding peace attempts in the Chaco. It co-opts with the League of Nations on the Lytton Commission for peace in Manchuria. It cooperates with the League on the Letitia Commission for peace between Peru and Colombia. But it shies away from a Chaco Commission for peace between Bolivia and Paraguay. Latin-Americans can't understand why.

Merry-Go-Round

Freitas Valle, erudite counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, has become an addict at running toy electric trains. He acquired the habit when his young son was in bed with a tonsil operation and made his father do all the work. The Brazilian Embassy, incidentally, has been electrified into one of the most energetic in town. Ambassador Abara, onetime leader of the revolution which put President Vargas in power, is bent upon revolutionizing relations between the United States and Brazil—sanitizing and sterile under his predecessor.

One reason for the efficiency of Ickes' right hand man, Herbert K. Burrell, is the efficiency of his secretary, Mrs. John Macaulay.

The Securities Exchange Commission is setting a high record in drafting high grade young men as its experts.

Sales of scrap iron to Japan during the first seven months of this year equalled the sales during all of last year—or half a million tons. This was three times as much as was sold in 1931—the year the Manchurian trouble started.

Faith Baldwin Sees the Creation of a Marian Martin Pattern

The Famous Novelist Takes You Here, Step by Step, Through the Great Organization Which Serves As a "Paris" and "Fifth Avenue" Style Center for Tens of Thousands of Women

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Skycraper," "White Collar Girl" and other famous best-selling novels.

THE other day, under delightful escort, I walked through the building which houses a great pattern service, the Marian Martin patterns so popular with the women who read this newspaper. Although I myself cannot sew a fine—or even a straight seam—I have observed with great interest the sketches of frocks shown in the newspaper pattern service and have often wondered how such a far flung

A Dressmaking Expert Shows Miss Faith Baldwin (at right) Precisely How Marian Martin Styles Are Made Up in Muslin Before Being Submitted for the Final Inspection of the Creator. This Step Permits Early Analysis of the Pattern as to Ease of Making and Economy of Material to Be Used.

The Dressmaker and the Grader Make a Careful Checkup on the Model for Comparison With the Actual Sketch to Be Presented in the Newspaper.

and important business was conducted. Well, now I know!

I went from floor to floor in this building, and watched the pattern in the making, from the moment of its inception as a design to the moment of its leaving the building, neatly folded in an envelope and addressed to the woman who had ordered it by mail. That woman is duplicated by hundreds and by thousands and lives in just about every city, town and village in every state in the Union.

The charming, blue-eyed personality of Marian Martin dominates the scene. In her office she creates styles, she makes the sketch, she indicates fabrics and color and that sketch is sent to the art department to be turned into the pretty, trim, and very real girl or woman who looks at you, in her attractive frock, from the pages of your newspaper. It also goes to the dressmaking department where, by the method of cutting out the master pattern which is peculiar to this pattern house alone, the pattern is assured an absolute accuracy.

This master pattern is of heavy paper, and when it is completed is reproduced with perfect exactness in tissue paper copies which are the actual patterns. Simultaneously machines are printing the written instructions for this particular pattern, amply illustrated with drawings of the frock in the actual making, which make the pattern absolutely fool proof.

Pattern and instruction meet one another in an envelope, which by another brilliant method is so addressed that there is never a mistake in transcription, and mailed immediately to the woman who has ordered it. I would like you to consider the care in every step of this operation. So careful is it that Mrs. Blank who has ordered a size 18 and a certain pattern number, gets just that, and in an amazingly brief length of time . . . she does not get size 20 or size 14. She gets what she ordered.

There are numberless methods employed in the making and sending out of these patterns which belong to the business itself and of which I cannot tell you in detail. But I think I must tell you that I was so impressed by the swift and accurate efficiency of the entire process that I have talked about little else since the hours I spent in the pattern house.

Patterns Waiting to Be Mailed to the Readers of This Newspaper. The Marian Martin Mailing Service Has All the Efficiency of the United States Post Office, Enabling the Employees to Fill and Mail Orders on the Day of Receipt.

I watched the first sketch being drawn, I saw the copy for the final newspaper version being written, I saw the dresses being made in their muslin version and the master pattern in the process of cutting. I saw the envelopes being addressed to the women who had ordered the patterns; I saw them sealed and tied in bundles ready for the mails and I invaded the art department where in a sunny large windowed room the girls sat behind their drawing boards and completed the sketches for newspaper use.

There are as you see several sides to this business. There is the important part which gets the daily completed sketch to the newspaper and the other part which makes the patterns of that sketch and has them ready to send out to all those who write and ask for it.

There are other cogs in the machine. One cog especially interested me. This was a pretty and serene girl who sat at her own desk and dealt with mistakes and complaints and was still not in the least discouraged over her sex, as well she might be.

For there are women who send for a certain pattern and who forget to mention the size they want; or who send for the size they want and forget to include their names and addresses; or who send size and number and name and address but do not enclose the necessary small coins or stamps; or who do everything else correctly but neglect sending the number of the pattern itself! With such letters this pretty girl deals, and she must be able to tell these women why she has not been able to send their patterns. Besides these there are the other women, not, I am glad to say, many, who through some fault of their own have made a mistake in following the simple clear rules which come to them with every pattern and therefore are disappointed in the result.

There are other letters. Dozens and dozens of them. I was permitted to read a few and they created a warmth about my heart and a catch at my throat. Here was a letter from a girl whose mother makes the clothes for all the family. Her sister was to be married, and would Marian Martin advise her if such-and-such a pattern in such-and-such a material was proper and would it be becoming . . . and what would she, as maid of honor, wear?

Here was a woman who made all of her own frocks from the Marian Martin patterns and who could not get along without them. She had made three dresses for a friend, she wished to make more. She had never done any sewing until recent years, but thanks to this service she was well and becomingly dressed and at the minimum cost. Here another woman who had used the patterns wrote to tell her age and height and weight and coloring. She wanted advice about materials, and she wanted advice about a hair cut and even the color of her shoes! All these letters were answered promptly and faithfully and so, you see, the pattern service does not entirely confine itself to patterns of dresses, it goes further and sends the inquirer in city or town or village, or on a lonely farm or ranch, the patterns for living, the patterns even of behavior which some woman, puzzled over a personal problem, has demanded . . . and which she will receive.

Fascinating as were the actual business details, thrilling as I found the efficient and accurate working of a great machine, impressed as I was by the atmosphere which pervades this business, the happy atmosphere which seemed almost tangible among the employees, I was more excited by the possibilities of the magic of patterns. I hadn't thought much about women sewing. In my own time, I have seen the fad for family dressmakers wax and wane and the steady demand for ready made clothes take its place. I had given very little thought to the women who like to make their own clothes and those of their children and to the women who are forced to do the family sewing because of lack of income. I hadn't given a thought to the thousands upon thousands of women who with the help of a sewing machine, and carefully purchased material, clothe themselves and their daughters smartly and well through the years and the seasons.

These are the women to whom the pattern service comes as a friend. They may look at the sketch of the frock which is furnished them by the newspaper and so accurate a sketch is it that they will know what they will look like in that particular frock. They will order the pattern, they will buy the material. And then they will make the dress. They are successful, I imagine, about ninety-nine per cent of the time. They are proud of their success, they send Marian Martin their snapshots in the very dresses they have made.

I asked Miss Martin, idly, if she wouldn't love to see her dresses made up in material other than muslin. She looked at me in astonishment. "But I do see them!" she replied, "often and often, hundreds of them, every day in the street!" And I realized that of course, she did. Wherever she goes she must see her very own frocks, the styles she created, on the back of some slim girl or matronly older woman, who passed her by, unknowing, on road or pavement.

Miss Martin's frocks are right and they are wearable. She has a soft spot in her heart for the large woman as well as for the slim young girl who wants to dress smartly and to her own advantage.

Marian Martin had clothes sense from the time she was a little girl in Philadelphia. She loves clothes and she designs them, every day of her life. And these designs, springing from the creative mind of a charming, beautiful woman are picked into patterns and sent around the earth.

There is magic in these patterns . . . can't you see it? By their help a girl, living miles away from retail stores, or a woman whose income is so small that she can't dream of "shopping" can be suitably and attractively clad. What this means to the housewife, the youngster in high school, the girl dreaming of her first love, the grandmother whose life into old age is still occupied, there are no words to tell.

Not the Least Important Worker in the Involved Business of Producing Advance Style Patterns Is the Artist Whose Task Is to Put the Finishing Touches to the Sketches Which Are Later Reproduced.

Each of These Two Women Is a Supreme Artist in Her Line. At Left Is Miss Faith Baldwin, Famous Novelist and Short Story Writer, Pictured With Miss Marian Martin, Stylist.

All of These Office Workers Open the Orders You (and Tens of Thousands of Other Women) Send in, and Direct Them to the Proper Department.
